SANDY HOOK, Tuesday, Oct. 24—10½ A. M.

The steamship Washington has arrived from Bremen, via Southampton.

She brings 250 passengers, and London journals to the 11th inst.

The Washington left Bremen on the 6th inst., and has 200 tons freight and the usual mails.

Among her passengers are Baron GEROLT, Russian Minister at Washington, Baron DE BOSIECO, Bearer of Dispatches from St. Petersburg to the Russian Legation at Washington, J. H. FOSTER, Jr., Attaché to the United States Legation at Berlin, J. A. STALYBRE, ex-Postmaster General of Canada, and family, and Capt. NICHOLS and lady of the ship North Star, which had been sold in London.

The U. S. steamer San Jacinto, still remained in the Southampton Dry Dock.

The steamship Niagara arrived out on the 9th.

The Washington passed Oct. 21, at 2 P. M., lat. 45° 25', long. 55° 18', the brig Peacock, bound East.

No official dispatches had been published relative to the battle of Alma. The English lost 2,000 men, killed and wounded, and the French 1,400. Nothing but the want of cavalry prevented this decisive victory from being turned into a complete rout of the Russians.

The Allies had changed their plan, and were to attack Sebastopol from the south, where it was found to be weaker. The base of operations is Balaklava, where the cavalry and siege artillery are landed.

The Russians had sunk seven ships of the line at the mouth of the harbor.

The bombardment of Sebastopol began on the 5th October.

Marshal ST. ARNAUD is dead, and Gen. CANROBERT is Chief in command of the French Army.

Memel has been nearly destroyed by fire.

SECOND DISPATCH.

EDWARD GUIZOT's office will be adjusted. JAMES MCHENRY has suspended.

From the London Times of the 11th.

On the 5th, she passed a screw steamship, supposed to be the Ottawa, from Quebec for Liverpool.

By Telegraph from Vienna, Tuesday Evening.

There is a great concentration of Turkish troops at Mustachia.

BERLIN, Tuesday.—According to a Russian official dispatch from St. Petersburg, 9th, the allies had made no attack on Sebastopol up to the 3d. They still occupied Balaklava.

PARIS, Tuesday.—A dispatch from Vienna states that a dispatch from MENSCHIKOFF, received that day, announces that the allies had established themselves at Balaklava and Cape Chersonese, and that no attack had been made upon Sebastopol up to the 3d October. Gen. CANROBERT had been in the enjoyment of perfect health.

The Three Per Cents closed to-day at 76f. 35c., and the Four and a Halves at 96f. 70c., for the end of the month.

LATER.

A telegraphic dispatch dated 11 o'clock, from Paris, states that according to a message just received from Vienna, the bombardment of Sebastopol had commenced at 5 o'clock on the morning of the 4th.

A dispatch from Marseilles of the 10th announces that orders had been given to receive the remains of Marshal ST. ARNAUD with all the honors that were paid him upon his departure for Constantinople. The "farewell" which he had addressed to the Army, dated from his bivouac on the 26th September, had arrived at Toulon. He says that, overcome by the cruel disease against which he has so long struggled, he is obliged to resign his command. He pays the highest compliment to his successor, (CANROBERT,) who, says the Marshal, "will present the victory of the Alma, and will have the good fortune which I had imagined for myself, and which I envy him—that of leading you to Sebastopol."

MADRID, Oct. 5.—Three Per Cents 22.90. The Times of Oct. 9, 10 and 11, contains voluminous details of the battle of the Alma.

The news of the death of Marshal St. ARNAUD reached Paris and London on Sunday, the 8th.

After the battle of Alma, the Russians burst all the villages which they passed through. In their flight they left about 6,000 wounded behind them. Sebastopol was completely invested, and a body of 5,000 French and Turkish cavalry was to have left Varna on the 20th.

The Sinai arrived at Marseilles on Sunday evening. Advices from the Crimea to Oct. 1, were at Constantinople. The allied army arrived on the 26th at Balaklava, and the fort was surrendered on the 29th.

One thousand Russians, who were escorting a convoy of munitions of war, had been made prisoners—MENSCHIKOFF himself narrowly escaped capture.

The garrison of Anapa, (before reported burnt by the Russians,) 15,000 strong, was on its way to Sebastopol.

Berlin, Sunday Evening—The following official dispatch was published at St. Petersburg, on the 6th:

"Prince MENSCHIKOFF has advanced his army corps nearer to the north port. The French have left the north side without a contest, and embarked to join the English, who have landed at Balaklava."

TICKETED THROUGH.—At present human ingenuity seems to be taxed to the utmost to suggest means by which the lives of passengers may be saved even if a vessel goes down at sea. The last, and perhaps the least, we find in the Boston Transcript. It is the suggestion of an old sea captain, and contemplates a sufficient number of life boats to accommodate the passengers and crew; each boat to be provided with a compass, water and food, and to be numbered and placed under the command of an officer of a vessel. As each person takes passage in the vessel he is also ticketed for a position in one of the life boats, so that, in case of accident, each one knows where he belongs.

THE DUEL IN CANADA.

A Detailed and Authentic Statement of the Affair.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The article in your journal of this morning upon "The Duel in Canada," the joint representation of the Messrs. H——r and their friend JOHN T——s, consists of such a tissue of inaccuracies, that I am compelled, however reluctantly, to place a plain statement of the facts before the public:

STATEMENT.

On Thursday, Oct. 5, I was walking through the Second-avenue, and on turning Twenty-first-street observed that I was followed by a close carriage, with the curtains down. When opposite Gramercy Park, Mr. ROBERT H——r, Jr., descended from that carriage and approached me. The sequel will appear from the following note, addressed that afternoon to—

HENRY H——r: Sir—A word with you with regard to your father's most dastardly and unprovoked attack. I told him when he used violent language, raising threateningly his cane, that his age and gray hairs protected him from my resentment; that I should not raise my hand against him; that if he struck, he struck a defenseless man. Who but a coward could have offered a blow under these circumstances? Yet I received several upon my coat sleeve that could not, it is true, have harmed a fly, yet they were intended for blows, and had they come from any but a weak old man, he would never have left that ground alive!

If your father considers it a crime that I should have walked with his daughter in broad day in the public streets, why did he not seek me alone to vent his resentment, instead of exposing her in the most unpardonable, unparental and unmanly manner in a public promenade!

He has disgraced, not me, but himself; he has degraded his own daughter; he has made his name a by-word! I pity him!

And you, Sir, who have been so long a smoking spy over your sister's actions, what was your despicable conduct? Even more dastardly than his! Knowing that you were dealing with a gentleman of honor, who would not lift a finger against heavy-headed impotence, you remained skulking in the carriage, nor did you venture to approach until you saw us quietly crossing the street; then, very bravely, you shouted, "Give it to him again," adding, as I turned to you, "You cannot strike him, an old man." "No," I replied, "his gray hairs protect him; but to you, Sir, or any of your brothers, I am ready to give, at any moment, any satisfaction." You were too cowardly to offer to accept it.

You said you saw me walking yesterday morning, and the morning previous, with your sister. I gave you the falsehood, and now in black and white pronounce your assertion a wilful, deliberate fabrication.

But to-day, but I did jeer her as I met her to walk; and, if there be any impropriety in it, I, not she, am to blame. I assume the responsibility, and am ready to meet any and every consequence.

As to your advice to your father to give me "forty-eight hours to leave the City," allow me to inform you that I shall remain here just as long as suits my own good pleasure and convenience; though (to come to the point of my letter) I shall be most happy to leave with you, Sir, for some place where we can settle satisfactorily our difficulties, at even a shorter notice. I shall be ready to refer you to a friend the instant I receive your reply. Truly, your ob't servt, G. B. S——T.

THURSDAY, Oct. 5.

Up to this moment, (the evening of Wednesday, Oct. 11—six days,) I have received no answer to this communication, which demanded and admitted of but one reply.

On Saturday morning, October 7, I met Mr. GEO. P. H——r at the corner of Tenth-street and Broadway, who demanded if I had written the foregoing letter. I answered that I had, but had yet received no reply. He stated his intentions of assuming his brother's quarrel. I told him I had nothing to do with him in the premises until I had settled my affair with his brother ROBERT. On his persisting, I consented to waive all technicalities, and agreed, if he was determined to fix a quarrel upon me, to give him the amplest and speediest satisfaction. But I positively declined putting the matter in the manner he proposed, which was entirely repugnant to my education, associations and habits. Offering him the satisfaction of a gentleman, I positively refused any further communication with him except through a third party. He asked if I would be at home in an hour; I answered I should be at home in an hour and a half, with a friend prepared to receive his friend. He promised to send a friend at that time; I took out my watch,—it was half-past eleven; the appointment was arranged for 1 o'clock; I gave him a card with my address.

My friend was with me exactly after 1 o'clock; but we received no intelligence, verbal, letter, nor message, on the part of Mr. G. P. H——r. What was my surprise to receive on Sunday evening a strip of ruled paper bearing his name, after I had positively declined any communication with him except through a third party. Of course, I was advised by my friend that I could take no notice of this or any future attempt to see me in person, and that, as the time for a proper communication had passed, my course was to "go armed to meet my personal violence, should such be attempted."

To-day, (October 11) just as I was going to meet a party of gentlemen at dinner, I received a card left at my residence of some hour of the morning, from Mr. EDWARD E——n, and a request in lead pencil to state where I could be seen upon business of importance. This card was without envelope and left with the servant. This is the sixth day since my communication to Mr. HENRY H——r, whose quarrel Mr. GEORGE P. H——r assumed, and four days since my rencontre with the latter, and since his failure to keep his own appointment.

Conjecturing the purport of the card, and happy to be approached even at this eleventh hour in a proper manner, I empowered my friend Mr. T. J. B——N to act pro tem. for me. Immediately after dinner we hastened to his address, but found that number to be a place of business, and closed. We then went in pursuit of Mr. GEORGE P. H——r. Meeting him in the street, Mr. B——N joined him and requested the address of Mr. E——n's residence. This he could not give, but promised to send Mr. E——n in the morning to Mr. B——N's apartments. G. B. S——T.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, Oct. 11, 1854.

This statement was prepared that evening as the basis of Mr. B——N's conference with the friend of the opposite party, (and afterwards acted upon as such,) and I proceeded with a witness at an early hour the next morning to his address, and not finding Mr. E——n, left a card for him, appointing time and place for an interview with my friend. I may state in this connection that Mr. E——n at that interview informed Mr. B——N of the existence of a reply from HENRY H——r to my note which I never received, and subsequently furnished to him a copy. Declining to give me satisfaction, it was not of a nature to render further allusion to it important.

At Hoboken, N. J., on the 12th October, a sealed note addressed to me, and presented by Mr. E——n, was accepted in advance before opening by my friend pro tem. Mr. B——n, as a challenge from Mr. GEO. P. H——r. The following correspondence then ensued:

Edward E——n to Mr. B——n.

MR. B——n—Sir: An forty-eight hours have elapsed since the acceptance of the document handed you for Mr. S——r, will you please inform me the terms of settlement proposed. Your obedient servant.

EDWARD E——N.

OCTOBER 4, 1854.

Reply of Mr. B——n to Mr. E——n.

EDWARD E——n Esq.—Sir: Enclosed you will find a note which I had written in reply to your first communication this morning, previous to the receipt of the second.

Since Mr. H——r has not deputed any one to supply your place, will you have the goodness to present the enclosed to his future representative, whom we will meet at the time and place specified in the enclosed letter. An acknowledgment of the reception of these two letters will be very thankfully received at No.— Broadway, by Yours, very respectfully,

OCTOBER 14, 1854. T. J. B——N.

[Enclosure.]

EDW. E——n, Esq.: As you have demanded to know "the terms of settlement proposed," I have only to state that you should have heard sooner if our other friend had arrived as I expected from Philadelphia. He has not as yet, but will certainly meet us at the Canada side of Niagara Falls on Wednesday morning, at 12 o'clock, and there everything will be arranged according to the usual practice.

You will, therefore, be expected at that place and at that hour by Yours, very respectfully,

OCTOBER 14, 1854. T. J. B——N.

Reply of Mr. E——n to Mr. B——n.

MR. T. J. B——N—Sir: Your note of to-day is received. Allow me to say that I disclaim any further agency in the matter; have informed my friend Mr. H——r of the fact, and he will refer you to another person. Your obedient servant. EDW. E——N.

OCT. 14, 1854.

Fearful of an arrest, I left town with my friend pro tem. Mr. B——n, leaving copies of the above letters appointing time and place, to be served upon Mr. GEO. P. H——r in person by my friend Mr. R. T——s.

Mr. Geo. P. H——r to Mr. B——n.

T. J. B——N, Esq.—Sir: Your two notes of yesterday's date addressed to Mr. E——n, as also copies of same handed me last evening by Mr. T——s, have been duly received. My friend Mr. E——n is out of town. I shall meet you with my friend on the Canada side opposite the Falls on Wednesday next, at 12 o'clock M., without fail. Respectfully yours. G. P. H——R.

OCT. 15, 1854.

Mr. G. B. S——t to Mr. B——n.

T. J. B——N—My Dear Sir: Will you have the goodness to furnish me in writing an accurate statement of your first interview with Mr. ROBERT H——r, Jr., at Niagara Falls, on Wednesday, Oct. 18, and oblige

Yours faithfully ever,

OCT. 22, 1854. G. B. S——T.

Reply of Mr. B——n to Mr. S——t.

MR. G. B. S——T—My Dear Nephew: After being directed to find the Messrs. H——r in the Bowling-alley by the clerk of the ——, I met them coming from thence in the company of another person (known afterwards as JOHN T——n,) I addressed Mr. R. H——r, Jr., after saluting them all, who joined me in a general conversation upon the unlucky nature of this affair. While walking and conversing together, I inquired who was to be his brother's second. He answered Mr. T——n. "Why Mr. T——n is a friend of mine; I have letters from him in my pocket." "This is not the same person. Your Mr. T——n is from New-York, and Mr. T——n (who was then walking with Mr. GEO. P. H——r) is a gentleman and merchant from New-Orleans." When I met Mr. R. H——r, Jr. again, he introduced him to me as the second of his brother. He never told me in the confusion of names of Mr. T——n and T——n that Mr. T——n was a teacher of pistol shooting, and kept a pistol gallery in New-York. Had he done so, Mr. T——n never would have received my hand, and I would have informed Mr. R. H——r, Jr., that neither he nor Mr. T——n could hold any communication with me on an occasion like this.

I deny peremptorily (what I understand to be stated by him,) that Mr. ROBERT H——r, Jr., ever presented himself to me as his brother's second, or gave me the remotest intimation that such was the case. He delivered no authority from his principal, and I most positively affirm, he introduced to me Mr. T——n as his brother's second, and that he could not be presented to me on such an occasion in any other capacity.

An arrangement was entered into to wait the arrival of your friends, Mr. M. M——n and Mr. A. W. B——n, momentarily expected in the train then due. They shortly after joined us, and recognized this JOHN T——n, and informed me of the base impostion attempted to be practiced upon us.

I now have to state that if Mr. R. H——r, Jr., had presented a written authority from his brother, after the discovery of the true character and profession of said JOHN T——n, I would have rejected him (Mr. ROBERT H——r, Jr.,) also, on the ground of his association with his introduced friend, and his ignorance that a modus d'armes is never permitted to be in the presence of gentlemen in affairs of honor.*

I would never have permitted him to degrade my friend, an educated and honorable gentleman, to the infamy of a prize-fighter.

I will add that Mr. GEO. P. H——r, the principal, after my note declining on the part of Mr. B——n's friends to meet the individual he had seen fit to substitute on Mr. H——r's disclaiming any further agency in his matter, came up to me when about to enter my carriage and offered his hand. This, of course, I declined. In his confusion he then made some remark about the weather, to which I replied that if that was all he had to say, he had as well keep it to himself.

Faithfully your friend, T. J. B——N.

*In the presence of a Professor of any deadly weapon, dueling is murder by the laws of England.

Mr. B——n to Mr. Geo. P. H——r.

MR. GEO. P. H——r—Sir: For your information I enclose a copy of a letter from your friend Mr. E——n, on whose disclaiming any further agency in your matter, you have seen fit to substitute an individual whom Mr. E——n's friends cannot and will not meet. Mr. S——r must, therefore, decline receiving any further communication from you.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Enclosure.)

MR. THOS. J. B——n—Sir: Your note of to-day is received. Allow me to say that I disclaim any further agency in the matter—have informed my friend Mr. H——r of the fact, and will refer you to another person.

Your obedient servant,

OCT. 14, 1854. (Signed) EDW. E——N.

Mr. G. B. S——t to Geo. P. H——r.

GEO. P. H——r—Sir: The urgent necessities of my friends to take the afternoon cars from the American side of the Falls, precluded the possibility of my writing to you after the letter of Mr. T. J. B——n of Wednesday, Oct. 18, informing you that my friends, (Mr. A. W. B——n, and Mr. M. M——n,) declined meeting the substitute you had set up on Mr. E——n's "disclaiming any further agency in your matter," and whom R. H——r, Jr., endeavored to palm off upon Mr. E——n as a Mr. T——n, a gentleman and merchant of New-Orleans.

Contrary to advice in the first instance, I suffered you to assume the quarrel of HENRY H——r, who had screened himself behind his aged father, and skulked out of the affair under your cover.

On Saturday, October 7, my friend was in readiness at my rooms according to your appointment, to meet your friend to make all necessary arrangements. Your own appointment you failed to keep. I was then advised by my friend "that as the opposite party had failed to keep their appointment, made at their request, unless they could satisfactorily explain this breach of engagement, he, Mr. S——r, could proceed no further in the matter, &c."

On the afternoon of Wednesday, October 11, four days after your failure to keep your appointment, and the sixth day after my communication to HENRY H——r, which demanded and admitted of but one reply; you standing in the shoes of said Henry, I received a card from Mr. EDWARD E——n on your part.

I was again advised that after such a lapse of time, beyond the utmost limits prescribed by the code of honor, you were not entitled to any notice from me. Again, waiving as before all technical objections, I immediately empowered Mr. T. J. B——n, my friend pro tem., to confer with Mr. E——n and to accept the instant any message from you and make the necessary arrangements.

On Saturday, Oct. 14, just as Mr. B——n had addressed a note to Mr. E——n, appointing "the Canada side of Niagara Falls, on Wednesday morning, Oct. 18, at 12 o'clock, M.," as the place and time to settle preliminaries, he received a notice in writing from Mr. E——n "disclaiming any further agency in your matter."

I was again advised that as your friend disclaimed any further connection with you without assigning any reason therefor, and without any Attorney being appointed in his stead, it was impossible to take any further notice of you.

Notwithstanding all these constructive objections, anxious to give you a meeting in despite of your total disregard of every formality, I still again, and for the third time, waived all these my rights, and all technical objections, and caused to be served upon you that same evening, (October 14) by Mr. WM. R. T——n copies of the letters addressed to Mr. E——n appointing time and place for settling the preliminaries, Mr. T——n obtaining your acknowledgment in writing on the following day.

Without waiting for the appointment of an attorney in Mr. E——n's stead, I proceeded with my friend pro tem. to the place specified, presuming that my friends, who were to follow shortly, meet a gentleman and an equal as your representative in your substitute for Mr. E——n.

We were at the Canada side of Niagara Falls, on Wednesday morning, according to appointment, when my friend pro tem., Mr. B——n, informed me that ROBERT H——r, Jr., had presented to him your friend as a Mr. T——n, said H——r having represented him to be a gentleman, a merchant from New-Orleans.

As you are aware, an understanding was entered into to await the arrival of my friends momentarily expected in the train then due. At a little after 1 o'clock we were joined by my friends, Mr. ALEX. W. B——n, Mr. M. M——n, of Philadelphia, and my surgeon, Dr. W——s.

My friend, Mr. M——n, recognizing your friend, then falsely represented by said ROBERT H——r, as a gentleman and merchant of New-Orleans to be one JOHN T——n, the keeper of a public Bowling-alley, Bar-room and Pistol-Gallery, of the City of New-York; immediately notified my friend, Mr. B——n, of the fact, and the contemptuous imposition then infamously attempted to be practiced upon us.

My friend Mr. B——n at once declined to hold an interview with such a character, and informed your friend, Mr. E——n, of the fact, and of his determination to leave the ground if your friend persisted in his attempt to palm off such a character as a gentleman and a fit associate for his friend.

Having satisfied all there to be considered as a gentleman of such character, I then, for the sake of my friend, consented to meet your friend, Mr. H——r, of New-York. I then informed my friend that I was ready to meet his friend, Mr. H——r, of New-York. I arrived at the place on Wednesday, the 18th inst., and found you there prepared to execute all the preliminaries, and to go

OHIO—POLITICS AND MONEY.

State Elections—Causes and Effect—Moral of Politics—Pretended Crisis—Failure of Banks—Taxation and Legislation.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, Oct. 19, 1854.

Although politics and money are neither of them within the usual range of my correspondence with you, Mr. TIMES, yet, there is something so singularly interesting in both at the present time that, I cannot refrain from a passing commentary. Ohio has given in round numbers SEVENTY THOUSAND majority against the administrations of both the General and State Governments; Administrations which two years since were inaugurated by the popular verdict, with the hosannahs of triumphant victory! A more signal and significant fact has never occurred in our political history,—and men who have not watched closely the signs of the times, look amazed, and ask what it means? To me there is no mystery, and, if you please, I will let you a little behind the scenes. I shall confine myself to this State, with whose political machinery I am well acquainted. In the first place, this revolution has been produced by a combination of causes; but that affords no consolation to the Administration, when it is considered that these causes have one common root—the demoralization of the Democratic party. This showed itself in different ways, and therefore presented different points of attack to different antagonisms. These antagonisms are not the less real, nor the less fatal to the Democratic organization, because they exist in different sections of the people. They all coincide in one popular conviction—that the Administration is adverse to the interests of the country, and deficient in principle; that Congress and the State Legislature have failed in their duty, and that it is time people themselves corrected the evils of party organizations. In this State there were three points of antagonism, which can be easily understood, by the views of these different bodies of three different political sections, as given to me. An eminent Free-Soiler said, "We shall carry the State by thirty thousand; the Whigs, Free-Soilers, and Anti-Nebraska Democrats are united." A distinguished and able Democrat said, "The Democratic party in this State are gone. The people will not endure this sort of taxation, or Nebraska either." A leading Whig said, "We shall overturn things entirely. There are 80,000 Know-Nothings, and they are thoroughly organized." Here are three different ideas, but all of them real, and either one of them sufficient to defeat the party in power. I will give you two or three details, which will make the whole thing plain.

In the first place, the Democratic party have had no majority in Ohio. The majorities against them were in 1836,—eight thousand,—in 1840, twenty-three thousand,—in 1844, thirteen thousand,—in 1848, sixteen thousand,—in 1852, seventeen thousand. In 1848, and 1852, they carried the Electoral Ticket,—by divisions, which never should have existed,—and which the Nebraska bill healed up. It is obvious then, that the union of the Whigs and Free-Soilers would defeat the Democratic party,—and the illustration is, that the Western Reserve gave the Republican Ticket 15,000 majority. But the Nebraska bill did more, it drove off thousands of independent Democrats, and thousands of liberty-loving Germans.

The second antagonism was that of the Know-Nothings; and this again owes its existence to the demoralization of parties, and especially the Democratic, in courting the foreign or naturalized vote,—at the expense of principle and of all American feeling. This source of irritation was carried to a most provoking and audacious extent, so as to be utterly unendurable. The Roman Catholic Church, instigated doubtless by the favoring and flattery of demagogues, undertook to interfere with the Public Schools;—and, to crown the whole, foreigners who owed their existence and their comforts to the broad mantle of American charity, had the audacity to question candidates, as to what they said and how they would vote, about Germans, Poles or Irish. The right they have, but the impudence of its exercise is extreme. But why should Know-Nothings go Anti-Nebraska? Because the Know-Nothings in Ohio are Anti-Nebraska, and so are nine-tenths of the whole people. But, thirdly, a most efficient cause of disturbance in the Democratic ranks is the TAX and Small Note laws,—the former of which is most oppressive on business men, and the latter equally annoying to laborers. In fine, the legislation of the State, under the present dynasty, is unjust and unreasonable,—vexatious to all classes of men. To restrict commerce, to fetter credit, to forbid Bank notes, or to say how large or small they shall be, is a legislation worthy only of a convent of monks. And yet all these things, our new Constitution, and the Radicals who administer it, endeavor to do.

These causes have sent a delegation to Congress, in which there is not one spared monument to the dynasty, which two years since was ushered in like a morning star, with songs of joy! In one year more, when the State Legislature comes under the revision of the people, the last remnant of that dynasty will disappear.

The financial crisis here is almost as remarkable as the political. Within three days, two Banks, two or three private Bankers and several merchants have failed,—and there is no probability that it will end with these. The general cause assigned is the want of currency—which sounds to me very much like a verdict of death for want of breath. The immediate cause undoubtedly is the driving in of Indiana Stock Notes—of which eight millions of dollars had been issued in twelve months! When the Bank runners here carried home their money for redemption, the return was like that made upon the writ of an Arkansas Sheriff, non comest-bus in swampibus. If these Stock Banks were not literally in swampibus, they were figuratively; for the most acute money-changer could extract nothing from many of them,—but promises. This sort of currency has disappeared, as suddenly as it came, and with it the credit of many who merely floated on its wave. The great cause, however, of all financial crises is the extravagance and over-indebtedness of the country—and the crisis will go on till there is curtailment and economy. In Cincinnati there has been a vast accumulation of solid and real wealth, in a short time. The people here can afford a short period of commercial adversity—and will be the stronger for it. They will resume their career with unprecedented vigor.

VIATOR DEL OCCIDENTE.

Discipline on Steamers.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Oct. 24.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I saw in your paper last week some remarks, accompanied by a letter from Captain FORBES, upon the neglect in our Merchant Steamers to frequently assemble the crew at stations assigned them in case of fire, collision, &c.; that when such does really occur, the duties of the ship may be carried on without confusion or panic. My experience, and it is a pretty long one, entirely confirms what you say, as it does bye-the-bye what your correspondent F. L. O. says.

There is one exception, however, in the line composed of the steamers Cahawba and Black Warrior, and I think their captains should have the benefit of it. On board of these vessels not only have the men always been stationed at fire quarters, but they are regularly mustered at these stations at the tolling of the bell, at least twice a week, and there drilled in the work necessary in cases of fire, such as screwing on and leading along hose, manning pumps, &c. Two boats are always kept ready for lowering at sea, crews are allotted to all the boats, men stationed to lower them, and are exercised at doing so in port; the firemen have their boat, and the rest are for the passengers; none of the crew, except those manning the boat, being allowed to enter them until the passengers are in. If you have a spare corner, and will insert this, you will oblige your reader, well-wisher and occasional

CORRESPONDENT.

Congressional.

The Democrats in Brooklyn have nominated Mr. GEORGE TAYLOR as their candidate for Congress. The Eagle states that he is comparatively unknown in that city, but that he has very excellent testimonials from the South to his entire fitness for the place. His biography is thus sketched:

Mr. TAYLOR is a native of the "Old Dominion" of Virginia, and his family there occupies an honorable niche in history, as having participated with distinction in the Revolutionary struggles and in the last war; and they now occupy a distinguished social position in Virginia. Mr. TAYLOR commenced the exercise of his profession—the law—in the Western country, and for several years there, was also a leading member of the Democratic party, by whom he was honored with several places of trust and confidence. In Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, he was known as one of the most able and energetic young men in the party. In 1844 he traveled over Kentucky with Mr. BRECKENRIDGE,—the present distinguished member from the Lexington District,—and both did good service on the occasion.

From the West Mr. TAYLOR removed to the South and located in Montgomery, Ala.; and he was there also an active Democrat, and an intimate, personal friend of Hon. ARTHUR P. BAGLEY, then Senator of that State, and of our late Vice-President, Wm. R. KING, who frequently expressed the highest estimate of the talents and personal worth of Mr. TAYLOR. From his associations with Mr. KING, and his personal acquaintance with President POLK, in aid of whose election he had labored effectively, Mr. TAYLOR exerted a very considerable influence with that administration. He, however, declined to receive various appointments offered to him, because acceptance would interfere with his official duties. During President POLK's administration he removed to New-York City, and from thence to Brooklyn; and since 1848 has been an active but retiring and unofficious Democrat.

FAILURE IN BURLINGTON, VT.—A number of failures have recently occurred in Burlington, Vt. Among those who have been compelled to suspend payment, is the well known house of J. & J. H. PECK & Co., the oldest and most extensive wholesale establishment in that town. Those at all acquainted with the members of the firm, either as gentlemen or as business men, will cordially concur in the sentiment contained in the following paragraph from the Free Press:

The assignment which the long established and well known firm of J. & J. H. PECK & Co., have felt themselves constrained to make, is a subject of deep regret throughout a wide community, who have been, for so many years, acquainted with it in business relations, or with its individuals, as kind and generous members of society. Proverbial for honorable enterprise, industry, and close attention to business, the concern has stood on, under the father alone, or as associated with his sons, through all the fluctuations and trials of nearly fifty years, with an unshaken reputation, to the present time.

The shock to which they have now yielded, is a direct result, as we are informed, of their being security for other parties, whose debts, in the straitened condition of the money market, and with more limited Bank accommodations than they felt that they had a right to expect, the Messrs. PECK & Co. were not ready to meet at once, to the peril of other parties who had a more direct claim upon them.

Their assets are very large, and it cannot be doubted that, with a reasonable indulgence from those who have claims upon them, they will, in good time, not only free themselves from every obligation, but be in a condition to carry on their business again with credit and profit to themselves, and to the public benefit, as in times that are past.

New Inventions.

We have seen a working model of LITTLEFIELD'S Self-Adjusting Railroad Switch, which promises to do something towards preventing accidents arising from misplaced switches. The switch rails are thrown into adjustment by the pressure of the engine upon the preceding rail, the end of which is raised above the level of the track, and rests upon a lever. This lever being pressed down by the weight of the engine, carries forward an iron rod beneath the track that works another lever which moves the switch rails. The invention—if it works well—is not expected to obviate the necessity for the presence of a switch man, since it only provides for trains running one way. It has occurred to us that placing the lifted rail end but one rail's length from the switch leaves too little room to brake up in case of an accident. This would be a serious objection if it were the purpose to dispense with the switchman entirely. This is not the intent, however. It has the recommendation of Governor FAIRBANKS, of the Connecticut and Passumpsic Road, on which road it is now in use, experimentally, and of other practical men.

Laying of a Corner-Stone.

The corner-stone of a new Church edifice for the Clinton-avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, was laid yesterday afternoon with the usual exercises. The location of this new Church is at the corner of Clinton and Lafayette-avenues, one of the most pleasant sites in the City. The style of the Church is to be Romanesque, the main spire is to be 193 feet, and the lesser is to be 131 feet; the main tower will be 104 feet high. The building will extend back on Lafayette-avenue 140 feet in width, fronting on Clinton-avenue 68 feet—the material brick, with brown stone finishings. The land and building, when complete, will cost $62,000; $20,000 of this amount has been contributed already to this enterprise. At the laying of the corner-stone yesterday, addresses were made by Rev. J. P. THOMPSON, of New-York; Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER, of Brooklyn, and Rev. Dr. LANSING, Pastor of the Church. The attendance was quite large, and a liberal amount was contributed.

☞ We understand that the law firm of MORGAN, BLATCHFORD & SEWARD, at Auburn, is dissolved. Hon. C. MORGAN, the senior member, will continue the practice of his profession in that city. SAMUEL BLATCHFORD and C. A. SEWARD, Esqs., remove to New-York, where, together with Hon. W. GRISWOLD, Esq., they will resume business at No. 4 Hanover-street. The change, we are gratified to learn, is made to meet the requirements of a large and growing practice, mainly in the United States Courts. The ability and indefatigable industry by which this practice has been built up at Auburn, are guarantees that it will be even more successful and profitable in New-York.—Albany Journal.

THANKSGIVING.—Governor BIGLER has fixed upon Thursday, the 30th of November, as a day of General Thanksgiving throughout Pennsylvania.

SIR JOHN FRANKLIN.

Detailed Account of the Discovery of his Fate—Letter from Dr. Rae.

From the Montreal Herald of Saturday, Oct. 21.

We are indebted to Sir GEORGE SIMPSON, Governor of the Hudson's Bay Territory, for the privilege of first publishing to the civilized world the at length ascertained fate of the noble but illstarred Sir JOHN FRANKLIN and his gallant company. Alas! that the fate should have been so sad; and that the problem, which has so long occupied the thoughts and engaged the energies of the great navigator's countless friends and admirers in Europe and America, should be solved by so painful, so distressing a narrative as is obtained in the following letter, which only reached Sir GEORGE SIMPSON yesterday afternoon—it having been forwarded from York Factory, via Red River. Our own hopes of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN's restoration to the world had, we confess, long ceased; but who could have been prepared for the fearful reality—a miserable and lingering death, from literal starvation—possibly, as Dr. RAE conjectures, worse than starvation—on the frozen and desolate shores of the Arctic Ocean. But we shall not detain the reader, by any reflection of ours, from the perusal of Dr. RAE's intensely interesting narrative—we shall merely mention that York Factory is situated at the mouth of Hayes River, in Hudson's Bay, in about 56° N. L., 93½° W. L.

Dr. Rae's Letter to Sir George Simpson.

YORK FACTORY, Aug. 4, 1854.

MY DEAR GEORGE: Your several letters, public and private, of dates 13th June, and 1st December, 1853, and 13th and 16th June, 1854, were handed me on the 26th ultimo, on my reaching Churchill, and I rejoiced to learn that your health had benefited so much by your visit to the North.

Let me now allude to the expedition affairs. I arrived here on the 31st ult. with my small party, in excellent health, but I am sorry to say, without having effected our object. At the same time, information has been obtained and articles purchased from the natives, which places the fate of a portion, if not all of the then survivors of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN's miserable party beyond a doubt—a fate the most deplorable,—death from starvation, after having had recourse to cannibalism as a means of prolonging life.

I reached my old quarters at Repulse Bay, on the 15th August, and preparations were immediately commenced for wintering. On the 1st September I explained to the men our position, the stock of provisions we had on hand, (not more than three months' rations,) and the prospects we had of getting more, &c., &c., pointing out all the danger and difficulty of our position. All readily volunteered to remain, and our exertions to collect food and fuel went on with unabated energy. By the end of September, 100 deer, 1 musk ox, 54 brace of ptarmigan, and one seal had been shot, and the nets produced 190 salmon.

Of the larger animals above enumerated, 49 deer and the musk ox were shot by myself, 21 deer by MISTIGAN, (the deer-hunter,) 14 by one of the men, 9 by OUILLESUCK and 16 by the other four men. The migration of the deer terminated about the middle of October, and 25 more animals were added to our stock.

On the 29th of October, the snow being sufficiently hard for building, we were happy to exchange our cold tents for the more comfortable shelter of the snow-house. The Winter was very severe, but the temperature in our snow huts was never so low as in my Winter quarters of 1846-7. Up to the 12th January we had nets set under the ice in the lakes, the nets were taken up on that date, as they produced nothing.

On the 31st of March my Spring journey commenced, but in consequence of gales of wind, deep and soft snow, and foggy weather, we made but very little progress. We did not enter Folly Bay until the 17th. At this place we met with Esquimaux, one of whom, on being asked if he ever saw white people, replied in the negative, but said that a large party, (at least 40 persons,) had perished from want of food, some 10 or 12 days' journey to the westward. The substance of the information, obtained at various times and from various sources, was as follows:

In the Spring four Winters past, (Spring, 1850,) a party of white men, amounting to about forty, were seen traveling Southward over the ice, and dragging a boat with them, by some Esquimaux who were killing seals on the North shore of King William's Land, which is a large island named Kelúktak by the Esquimaux. None of the party could speak the native language intelligibly, but, by signs, the natives were made to understand that their ships or ship had been crushed by ice, and that the "whites" were now going where they expected to find deer to shoot. From the appearance of the men, all of whom, except one officer, (chief,) looked thin, they were then supposed to be getting short of provisions, and they purchased a small seal from the natives.

At a later date, the same season, but previous to the disruption of the ice, the bodies of about thirty white persons were discovered on the continent, and five on an island near it, about a long day's journey—say thirty-five or forty miles—to the northwest of a large stream, which can be no other than BACK's Great Fish River—named by the Esquimaux Out-koo-hi-ca-lik—as its description, and that of the low shore in the neighborhood of Point Ogle and Montreal Island agree exactly with that of Sir GEORGE BACK. Some of the bodies had been buried—probably those of the first victims of famine—some were in a tent or tents, others under a boat that had been turned over to form a shelter, and several lay scattered about in different directions. Of those found on the island, one was supposed to have been an officer, as he had a telescope strapped over his shoulder and his double-barreled gun lay underneath him.

From the mutilated state of many of the corpses, and the contents of the kettles, it is evident that our miserable countrymen had been driven to the last resource—cannibalism—as a means of prolonging life.

There appears to have been an abundant stock of ammunition, as the powder was emptied in a heap on the ground by the natives, out of the kegs or cases containing it, and a quantity of ball and shot was found below high water mark, having been left on the ice close to the beach. There must have been a number of watches, telescopes, compasses, guns, (several double-barreled,) &c., all of which appear to have been broken up, as I saw pieces of the different articles with the Esquimaux, and together with some silver spoons and forks, purchased as many as I could obtain. A list of the most important of these I enclose, with a rough pen-and-ink sketch of the crests and initials on the forks and spoons. The articles themselves shall be handed over to the Secretary of the Hon. H. B., &c., on my arrival in London.

None of the Esquimaux with whom I conversed had seen the "whites," nor had they ever been at the place where the dead were found, but had their information from those who had been there, and those who had seen the party when alive.

From the head of Folly Bay—which is a bay, spite of Sir H. BEAUFORT's opinions to the contrary—I crossed sixty miles of land in a westerly direction, traced the west shore from Chesne and Pelizy River to Cape Porter of Sir JAMES ROSS, and I could have got within thirty or forty miles of Bejot Strait, but I thought it useless proceeding further, as I could not complete the whole.

Never in my former Arctic journeys, had I met with such an accumulation of obstacles. Fogs, storms, rough ice, and deep snow we had to fight against. On one occasion, we were four and a half days unable to get a glimpse at the sun, or even to make out his position in the heavens. This, on a level coast, where the compass was of little or no use, was perplexing in the extreme.

The weather was much finer on our return journey than when outwards bound, and our loads being lighter, our days' marches were nearly double the distance, and we arrived at Repulse Bay on the 20th May, without accident, except in one instance, in which one of the party lost a toe from a frost bite.

The commencement of Spring was very fine, but June and July were colder. We were unable to get out of the bay until the 6th of August.

Our progress along the coast as far as Cape Fullerton, was much impeded by ice; but on getting to the southward of the Cape we had clear water, and saw no ice afterwards.

The conduct of the men, I am happy to say, was, generally speaking, good; and we had not a single case of sickness all the time of our absence.

Being anxious to send this to Red River by the first boats, I write in haste and briefly, but shall have the pleasure of sending a more detailed account by some future opportunity.

With the utmost respect, I have the honor to be,
Your very obedient servant, JOHN RAE.

SLAVERY IN KANSAS.

A Slaveholder's View of the Prospects of Slavery in Kansas.

The defenders of the Nebraska bill are just now claiming that Slavery cannot by any possibility obtain a foothold in that territory or in Kansas. The following letter published in a Georgia paper, will show what Slaveholders on the spot think of it:

PLATTE Co., Mo., Saturday, Sept. 9, 1854.

DEAR BROTHER—In answer to your inquiries relative to Kansas, Nebraska, and this country, for the sake of convenience, I will somewhat transpose your questions, and thus be able to reply more intelligibly.

You are doubtless advised of the efforts of the Abolitionists to induce such an emigration of those opposed to Slavery, as shall exclude it from the Territory. These efforts, with the usual emigration from the non-slaveholding States, will necessarily throw into the Territory a large population opposed to Slavery. Should they even succeed in becoming the majority, I am yet fully convinced that Kansas will be a Slave State—Slavery does now exist there, in fact. The number of slaves is daily increasing. Of those who go from this State, a large number will be either Slaveholders, or their children; and, though they may for a time leave their slaves in Missouri, they will not the less influence their friends and neighbors, who may even in their feelings be inclined against Slavery, to oppose its exclusion for their sake. At present, the portion of the Territory open for settlement is mainly in the possession of those favorable to Slavery—they cover the larger portion of the Territory suitable for small farms and men of limited means. The parts unoccupied are prairies remote from timber, and unfit for settlement by poor men. Could the question be determined at an early period, the character of the population, the superior intelligence, their familiarity with political canvasses, their position in the Territory, would give these favorable to Slavery a decided advantage. In addition to all which, there are two causes which will, unless those favorable to Slavery should foolishly fear to settle in Kansas, and thus voluntarily give up the Territory, finally, certainly determine the condition of the Territory as a Slaveholding State.

As a matter of law, Slavery exists in the Territory—it needs no act of any legislation to establish it. It requires an act of competent authority to prohibit it. The Territorial Legislature is not competent to abolish or exclude it. This is deemed by the best lawyers a matter of certainty. It cannot be excluded until the people of the Territory form their Constitution for a State Government. By that time the true value of the Territory will be appreciated. It is, without doubt, the best fitted for poor settlers of any Territory ever opened—it is well adapted to men of wealth. The absence of timber requires for the making a farm more means than the Abolitionists possess. The houses must be framed, or of brick. Cabins cannot be built.

It is next to impossible to procure white laborers in the West: the only labor which can be hired is slave. The low price of land, the feelings and habits of the people, all conduce to make every man a landholder—to have a farm of his own. This is easy wherever timbered land can be had; there, with his axe and one plow, a man without help can build his cabin, hoe his corn, and make his farm. Such land cannot be found in Kansas. In those portions where timber is most abundant, it is all needed for the prairies; not an acre can be wasted. But to the man who has the ability to purchase the timber, to build his houses, and can command the labor to fence and break prairie, the prairie affords incalculable advantages. A farm is complete in one year; there are neither stumps nor grubs; all fresh, ready for the plow. The sod just broken will yield a heavy stock of crop corn, nearly sufficient to pay the expense of its cultivation. The late breaking will yield a crop of wheat equal to the best old land. Though it requires capital to make it, a prairie farm will pay for itself ten times over before the stumps can be removed from timbered land.

Many emigrants are going to Kansas from Kentucky and other Slave States; Missouri will leave no stone unturned, even to the, at least temporary, emigration of half her population, to assist in from Abolitionists; and, if the People of the other Slave States do justice to themselves, we will secure it for the South.

In reply to your questions touching the soil of this country and that of Kansas, I will state that our County, Platte, is generally deemed to possess the best soil in our State, and indeed, in the Union. Our staple is hemp, of which it yields from 1,000 to 1,200 pounds per acre, worth from four to six cents per pound. It is also finely adapted to grains, yielding from fifty to one hundred bushels of corn, and from fifteen to forty bushels of wheat to the acre. It is finely supplied with water, an abundance of springs—generally limestone water—and nearly all our country is heavily timbered. Kansas, in the fertility of its soil, is not equal to this county, but a large portion of it is good hemp land, and all of it good for the grains, and peculiarly adapted to grass. It is well supplied with excellent water, good building stone, and stone coal, and is far better than any land you will probably see in any old State.

Slave labor is worth, at this time, more with us than in almost any part of the Union. Negro men hire readily at from $150 to $200 per annum; women at from $80 to $120. Men sell at from $1,200 to $1,500; women, from $800 to $1,100. Our country is as healthy as any fertile land can be; Kansas will probably be even healthier; negroes particularly enjoy almost an exemption from disease.

We have now two Railroads in process of construction through our State; one a short distance north of our county, terminating at St. Joseph, in the adjoining county, and which in say two years, will connect directly with New-York—the other from St. Louis to Kansas, a town opposite the southeast corner of our county. The two will immediately be connected by a road through our county.

The Vice President resides at our county-seat, and is the most devoted Southern man in the Union. We give him the credit of the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, he having taken that stand almost alone. His whole influence is, of course, in favor of Slavery in Kansas.

You will perceive that I have answered your latter questions without reference to their order, as the answers necessarily run into one another.

As to the price at which lands in Kansas will rate, in say ten years, it is of course but a mere opinion. Lands in this County rate very high, from $15 to $50 per acre, but of course it must be some years before the lands in Kansas can generally command these prices. So soon as improved, we suppose the lands near the river will bring prices nearly or quite equal to the lands on this side. Lands remote from the river will, as in this State, rate for much less.

My letter is too long, but I have aimed to be full, and you may rest assured I have been fair and candid—I have not written a word that I do not honestly believe. I have not attempted by false coloring to mislead my friends, but have stated the truth, that they may know that Kansas is peculiarly fitted for slave labor—was intended for a Slave State, and will be so unless the South sleeps on its rights, and neglects its duty.

Your affectionate brother,
ED. M. DORSON.

Martin Van Buren—His Autobiography.

From the Evening Post.

PARIS, Wednesday, Oct. 4, 1854.

Mr. VAN BUREN is at VEVAY in Switzerland, and you will be pleased to learn, is actually and earnestly at work upon his autobiography, in which he has already advanced some two or three hundred pages. He is very much interested in the [illegible] with all his partisan animosities and prejudices—for he had some, though fewer than any man I ever knew who had spent so large a portion of his life in party conflict. He has been an intelligent spectator of politics in the United States so long now, that all his old prejudice and antipathies seem to have exhaled. He will not be home until next year. MARTIN's health is not materially better.

EFFECTS OF STRIKES.—At the meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, Mr. ASHWORTH, of Bolton, read a paper on the Statistical section on the Preston strike, its history and effects. He adduced exact figures to show the losses occasioned by the strike. Loss to the employers, £165,000; loss of wages to the operatives, £150,000; loss to the strike-fund contributors, £97,000; loss to auxiliary occupations, £10,000; total loss to the community, £533,000. Reverend Mr. CLAY, Chaplain to the Preston House of Correction, added some statistics on the personnel of the strike. He estimated the total number engaged at 19,000; of these 6,900 were males, and 11,500 females; boys under thirteen, 620; girls under thirteen, 650; youths thirteen and not more than eighteen, 1,530; girls between the same ages, 4,400; men above eighteen, 4,000; women above eighteen, 6,750. He also showed, that during the strike there was a remarkable diminution in the number of the deaths of infants; which he referred to the fact that the mothers had more time to pay attention to their children.

LONG ISLAND.

THE WICKHAM TRAGEDY.

TRIAL OF NICHOLAS BEHEEHAN.

A Jury Empanneled—Intense Excitement.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

SUFFOLK COUNTY OYER AND TERMINER.
Before Judge Strong and three Associate Justices.

RIVERHEAD, Suffolk Co., Monday, Oct. 23, 1854.

The excitement has increased here respecting the trial of Nicholas Beheehan for the murder of the Wickham family, on the morning of the 24 of June last. A large number of persons have arrived from various parts of the Island, all anxious to see the culprit and witness his trial. On the arrival of the New-York train this afternoon, we noticed among the passengers Judge Strong, Hon. Ogden Hoffman, Mr. Hadden, Mr. Veil, Judge Ross, and other distinguished members of the bar.

The Court promptly organized at the appointed hour, with the following Judges on the bench:

Judge STRONG, Supreme Court; Judge WM. P. BUFFET, County Judge; HENRY HUNTING, ENOCH F. CARPENTER, Justices of the Sessions. The Clerk called over the names of those summoned as Grand Jurors, and the panel was announced complete.

Judge STRONG charged the Jury, and remarked the criminal calendar only presented the names of two prisoners remaining in jail, viz.: Nicholas Beheehan and Jacob Hempstead. These cases, the Judge said, had been disposed of a few weeks ago by the Grand Jury of the County Court. His Honor then delivered his charge as required by the statute, and the members of the grand inquest then retired for deliberation.

The Clerk then commenced calling off the names of the 40 petty jurymen, and over 30 of them answered. Meanwhile Beheehan was unshackled, and walked into the Court-room between two officers. He looked bold, and marched to the prisoner's box with a firm step.

The prisoner was attired in a suit of new black clothes, and seemed to care but little about his fate.

Mr. HADDEN, of Brooklyn, being associated with Attorney General HOFFMAN on behalf of the people in this case, arose and read the official documents.

Mr. Hadden, (looking at the prisoner, at the conclusion of the first indictment,) addressed the culprit as follows: "Nicholas Beheehan, you have heard the indictment against you read, and do you wish now to be tried upon it?"

The Prisoner (looking very sullen) replied in a rough tone of voice: "Why yes, I do, if the folks I wanted to come are here."

Counsellor Craig here interposed, and told the prisoner to keep quiet.

Mr. Hadden then read the indictment charging Beheehan with the murder of Mrs. Frances Wickham, and when he concluded, he again asked the prisoner the usual question, "Are you ready to be tried on this indictment?"

The prisoner loudly exclaimed, "Who says all that?" He was soon quieted by the officers.

Counsellor Craig now appeared as counsel for the prisoner.

Judge Strong asked the Attorney-General which case he intended to call on first, to which Mr. Hoffman replied, "We will move on the indictment for the murder of James Wickham first."

On motion of Mr. Hoffman, the Court was substituted for "triers" respecting the challenges of Jurors. To this Mr. Craig assented, and subjoined will be found the substance of the proceedings in obtaining the Jury. It will be observed that not a single resident of the town of Southold (where the deed was committed) was admitted as a Juror.

Charles V. Scudder of Southampton was first called.

Counsellor Craig said he wished to ask the Juror some questions, and he was duly examined.

Mr. Scudder didn't know the prisoner, but had read the account of the murder in the papers; never had formed any opinion as to his guilt or innocence; he felt perfectly impartial, but he believed he was guilty, if the report was true.

Counsellor Craig—I don't think he is a competent Juror.

After a few other questions the gentleman was set aside.

Orlando Hand was next called and peremptorily challenged. Set aside.

William Veil, challenged and examined—Had read an account of the murder in his County paper; he felt as if he could render an impartial verdict in accordance with the testimony. Mr. Veil was then received as a Juror.

Jeremiah Osborn was called and questioned—He had read an account of the murder, but believed Beheehan guilty, if what he had heard was true. Had formed an opinion and was admitted.

Hiram Wines examined—I have read an account in the papers, but never allow myself to form any opinion in any case until I hear testimony. Admitted.

James A. Homsford, examined—and having formed no opinion was admitted.

Jacob Strong was challenged peremptorily and set aside.

George B. Mills, examined and admitted.

Hermann Strong, examined—He had not read any account of the murder, and therefore formed no opinion. Admitted.

Platt R. Hubb, examined, and thought the prisoner was guilty, if the report should prove to be true. Admitted.

Albert L. Hedges, examined—Had read the accounts in the papers, and feeling perfectly impartial in the case, was admitted.

Scudder S. Hawkins, examined—Had read the accounts in the newspapers, but having formed no opinion, was admitted.

Daniel H. Goldsmith—Set aside.

Aaron V. Tuthill—Challenged peremptorily, and set aside.

Madison Young—The same.

Brewster Terry, examined—He had read the TIMES' reports of the case, but felt unbiassed. Admitted.

J. Hedges Tuthill—Set aside.

Benjamin W. Young—Set aside.

John D. Edwards, examined—Had read the newspaper accounts, but felt impartial, and could render a verdict in accordance with the evidence. Admitted.

The Jury was then complected, as follows:

1. Charles V. Scudder,	7. Albert L. Hedges,
2. Wm. Veil,	8. John D. Edwards,
3. Henry Strong,	9. James A. Sandford,
4. Brewster Terry,	10. George B. Mills,
5. Jeremiah Osborn,	11. Scudder S. Hawkins,
6. Hiram Wines.	12. Platt R. Hubb.

In the presence of the Jury and the prisoner the indictment for the murder of James Wickham was again read by the Clerk of the Court, and the Judge then announced that the Court was ready to proceed with the trial.

By mutual consent of counsel, the Jury was dismissed, under charge from the Court to refrain from conversing on the subject before them. Adjourned until eight o'clock the next morning.

SECOND DAY.—TUESDAY, Oct. 24.

The Court resumed the trial of NICHOLAS BEHEEHAN at 8 o'clock this morning. The Court-room was densely crowded with spectators, and a large number were unable to gain admission.

At the opening of the Court, JAMES H. TUTHILL, Esq., of the law firm of MILLER & TUTHILL, was appointed by Judge STRONG to take the evidence.

A few minutes past 8, o'clock the culprit was placed in the prisoner's box, and the case was opened with an eloquent speech by Mr. HADDEN, on the part of the people. Mr. HADDEN briefly reviewed the details attending the horrible crime, in very affecting language, in which the spectators listened with marked attention. He asked the Jury to consider the case carefully, and not to convict this man unless the evidence offered would sustain a verdict of guilty.

TESTIMONY.

The trial was then proceeded with and the first witness called was

William Wines, who was sworn and testified as follows: I am the Coroner of this County; I reside at Greenport; I was acquainted with Mr. James Wickham; I last saw him alive on the morning of the 24 of June, 1854, about 10 o'clock.

Question—What was his condition? Answer—He was disturbed; he was lying there unconscious, and terribly injured; he survived until that evening.

Q.—What was the general character of the injuries? A.—He was extensively wounded and badly cut and bruised; I held an inquest on the following Sunday.

By Mr. Craig—Will you now describe where the wounds were situated? A.—They were on his head and face, both of which were full of cuts and bruises; I should suppose these wounds were inflicted with some sharp instrument four or five inches in length; the deceased looked as if he had been fighting with some person.

Q.—Did the deceased appear as if he had been resisting the force of some person? A.—He looked as if he had been handled by somebody; I can't say whether there were any wounds on the back of his head.

Samuel Tuthill was next called, and not answering to his name, Mr. Hadden called.

Ellen Holland, sworn and testified—I resided in the City of New-York; I knew James Wickham; did reside in his family at the time of his death; I lived with Mr. Wickham two years and seven months before his death; I know Nicholas Beheehan, and had known him since he had lived with Mr. Wickham; Beheehan had lived with Mr. Wickham about two months before his death. The witness here looked at the prisoner and recognized him as Nicholas Beheehan. The prisoner lost the house of Mr. Wickham the same week of the murder; I was acquainted with Nicholas by living in the same family for two years; the prisoner made pre-[illegible] of marriage to me on several occasions; I did not love him; I did not love Nicholas Beheehan; I told him so; I did not know at that time that was the reason for his leaving.

To Counsel for the Prosecution—On the night of the murder, I retired to bed about 9 o'clock; the girl, Catherine Duffy, went to bed with me; I lodged in the same story; I saw Mr. and Mrs. Wickham before I went to bed; I saw Mrs. Wickham last; Mr. W. was then in his bedroom; I saw Mrs. W. in the hall of the second floor, while on my way to bed; she took me good night; I went to sleep soon after getting in bed; before daylight I was awakened by noise and screams of Mr. and Mrs. Wickham; they slept on the floor below my room.

Q.—Was there a force dog about the house? A.—Yes, sir; he was very mean to strangers; he was usually kept in the kitchen, and was let there that night; on the night I heard Mr. and Mrs. Wickham screaming the dog was barking; the noise also awakened Catherine; we went and opened the door; before opening the door, I heard Mr. and Mrs. Wickham scream; I think I heard Mr. W. cry out, "Oh, oh!" I think I heard Mr. W. say once, "Oh, Nicholas!" the dog barked, and I could not hear distinctly, but I thought he said "Nicholas;" there were no doors between the door I opened and Mr. Wickham's room; I opened the side window, and Catherine got out on the kitchen roof; the milk house roof joined the kitchen; Catherine got out and went to wake up the neighbors; I got out of the same window and went to Mr. Corwin's.

Q.—What sort of a hat did Nicholas wear? A.—He had several caps, and a straw or chip hat; the morning after the murder there was a straw hat (or something of this kind) on the furnace in the sink room; I did not see that hat there after Nicholas left until the morning of the murder; I had used the sink room the day before; there had been some smoke through the sink room that morning; before she found the hat.

Q.—When did you next see Nicholas Beheehan. A.—On the Monday he was captured; it was about 10 or 11 o'clock when I saw him; it was in a wagon on the road.

Q.—What did you say to him. A.—I asked him if he was the murderer and he said "Yes," and "You are the cause of it;" at this time there were people in the wagon with him; I had no further conversation with him.

Cross-examination by Mr. Craig: I don't know exactly how old I am.

Q.—Are you thirty or thirty-five years of age? A.—I can't tell my age.

Q.—How long had Nicholas lived with Mr. Wickham before you and him became intimate

NEW-YORK CITY.

STILL ANOTHER MURDER.

Who Knows—Revenge of the Perpetrator.

Another shooting case, which will prove fatal, occurred yesterday morning in the Fifth Ward. The facts of the case are as follows: About 4½ o'clock, two rowdies went into the Porter House kept by JACOB MITCHELL, at No. 51 Anthony-street, and commenced acting in a very disorderly manner, apparently determined to create a row. The proprietor of the groggery, fearing serious consequences, left the place for the purpose of calling an officer. Meeting with Officer MAYNARD, who was on duty at the time, he accompanied him to the spot, reaching it as the two rioters were about leaving. One of the rowdies made threats to the officer, at the same time putting his hand in his bosom as if in the act of drawing a weapon. MAYNARD sprang at him, but he succeeded in eluding the officer's grasp, and made his escape down Anthony-street towards West-Broadway. Officer GRIER coming to his assistance they started in pursuit. When in West-Broadway, between Duane and Thomas-street, the man of whom they were in pursuit suddenly turned round, pulled out a pistol and fired at his pursuers, the contents of the weapon taking effect on the forehead of MITCHELL, fracturing his skull, and causing such a wound that his recovery is a matter of impossibility. GRIER desisted in the pursuit in order to attend to the wounded man, but MAYNARD followed the assassin, who turned into Duane-street, and made his escape under cover of darkness, into one of the numerous alleys in the neighborhood, and thence into Church or Thomas-street. As yet he has not been captured.

MITCHELL was conveyed to the New-York Hospital, where he lies in a dying condition. The doctors in attendance have given up all hopes of his recovery.

Captain CARPENTER, in his return to the Chief of Police, says: "I have had frequently occasion to report to you the great evil arising from these low groggeries being open at all hours of the night, thereby exciting the evil disposed to crimes of all kinds, and frequently, as in this case, ending in murder. If this house had been closed at a proper time no disturbance would have occurred, and MITCHELL would not have lost his life. As a peace officer, I once more call the attention of the Corporation and my fellow-citizens to the necessity of passing some stringent law to close all groggeries at a reasonable hour; and until this is done, the Police will be powerless in preventing many crimes, and particularly that of murder. A licensed place can keep open during the whole 24 hours, unless indicted."

Attempt to Burn up a Family.

The Fire Marshal's investigations have developed the fact that on the night of the 28th of August, a desperate attempt was made by an incendiary to burn up a dwelling-house at No. 137 West Thirty-first-street, occupied at the time by Mr. RICHARD WHEELER and family. The evidence taken before the Fire Marshal showed that at about 2 o'clock in the morning Mr. WHEELER was awakened by the crackling noise by fire permeating through the window shutter of his bedroom. He immediately aroused the other persons sleeping in the house, and then gave the alarm of fire, which soon brought the Police, firemen and neighbors to his assistance. It was then discovered that the fire was burning furiously from a small wood-house attached to the rear of the main building, from which the flames had spread up the weather boarding and had just burst through the window shutter, and were entering the window when fortunately discovered.

The fire was soon extinguished by the firemen, assisted by the neighbors, and on examining the shed from whence the fire came, it was found to have been the work of an incendiary. An iron hook was discovered appended to a kind of staple, which had been screwed into the woodwork of the main building, under the shed roof. To this hook a large bunch of old rags had been attached with a piece of copper wire. These rags had been saturated with oil in order to make them burn, and in this manner the stack had been applied by the incendiary.

The building was evidently fired with the intention of burning the inmates of the building, who were all in bed. The facts elicited during the investigation implicated certain parties as the perpetrators of the offence; but, unfortunately, not sufficiently to warrant their arrest. The Police in that vicinity, however, have a close watch on them, and they may yet be brought up to answer for the crime.

A Jealous Husband—A Wife Shot.

On Monday afternoon, Officer ELLIOTT of the Twelfth Ward was called upon to arrest a German tailor, named WILLIAM HAUBRUIR, residing in One Hundred and Ninth-street, near the Tenth-avenue, for shooting his wife, ROSANNA HAUBRUIR, in the head with a pistol; the shot with which it was loaded wounding her severely. The woman was conveyed to the Twelfth Ward Station-house, where her wounds were dressed by Dr. BELLS, who discovered a number of small sized shot lodged in the face near the eye. Her case was pronounced to be a very dangerous one, and she was sent to the Bellevue Hospital, where she now lies in an extremely critical condition. On the arrest of HAUBRUIR—who is now confined in the Jefferson Market Police Station—he attempted to shoot Mr. EASTMAN, who was assisting the officer who apprehended the prisoner.

HAUBRUIR states that it was his intention to have shot a brother tailor named MEYER, who had been on too intimate terms with his wife, and that they had had quarrels on that account. MEYER made a complaint last Summer against the accused for assault and battery, and he was sent to Blackwell's Island for the term of three months, during which period MEYER was in constant intercourse with the wife of the prisoner. On returning from the City on the afternoon in question, he found the seducer at his house, and immediately drew the pistol, firing it at him, but the woman while endeavoring to interfere, received the charge in her face.

Stabbing an Emigrant.

On Monday, as NICHOLAS BERGER, a German emigrant who had just arrived in this country, was passing out of a liquor store on the corner of Dover and Water-streets, he received a severe stab in the shoulder from some person unknown, who, after committing the deed, immediately fled, and has not been arrested. BERGER went to the store for the purpose of purchasing brandy to take on board the ship William Rathbone, where his family remained. His wound being of so serious a nature as to require immediate attention, he was conveyed to the City Hospital, where he now lies in a dangerous state.

New-York Prison Association.

The Executive Committee of the New-York Prison Association held their regular monthly meeting on Monday, at 4½ P. M., at the Society Rooms, Clinton Hall, Astor-place. Present—Messrs. HAVENS, OGDEN, DRINKER, BAKER and BALLARD; R. M. HAVENS in the Chair.

After the reading and approval of the minutes of the last meeting, Mr. BEALS, Agent of the Association, read a diary of his labors during the past month. It was replete with interest, showing the most practical good this Association is daily effecting for the unfortunate and poor and criminal who come under the province of its aid.

The following is a summary of the operations of the Association since their last report: Discharged convicts from Sing Sing, to whom aid was given and employment obtained in the country, 7; pecuniary assistance rendered to persons discharged from Blackwell's Island and other prisons, 45; situations obtained for 27, clothes to the destitute, 6; men, women and children discharged from custody by their recommendation, 40.

Mr. FRANCIS LEONARD was appointed Agent, to call upon the citizens of New-York, to solicit subscriptions and collect funds to enable the Society more fully to carry on its schemes of enlarged and benevolent endeavors.

After the transaction of some unimportant business, the meeting adjourned for one month, to meet at the same place.

Fires.

The stable owned by WM. B. AGNEW, Esq., in Eighty-eighth street near Avenue A, was totally destroyed by fire on Monday evening about 10 o'clock. The premises were occupied by LEONARD BUROUS, whose horse and a quantity of hay, valued at $600, were consumed.

The alarm of fire yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, was occasioned by the burning of some shavings in the book-bindery at No. 22 Gold-street.

Rowdyism in the Sixth Ward.

As GEORGE ROURKE, residing at No. 120 Third-street, was passing along Centre-street, near Duane, yesterday morning about 10 o'clock, he was attacked by a Frenchman, supposed to be ROGER MEYER, who dealt him a violent blow on the head with a club, causing a dangerous wound. ROURKE was taken to the Hospital for medical assistance.

Dr. CHARLES G. SNYDER was nominated and confirmed as Assistant Physician to the Penitentiary Hospital.

An appropriation of $250 was made for the repair of Bellevue Hospital.

A large amount of other business, but none of general interest, was transacted.

MURDER TRIALS.

Trial of Henry King for the Murder of Timothy Redding, through Jealousy.

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER.

Before His Honor Judge Mitchell.

TUESDAY, Oct. 24.

The Court opened this morning at 10 o'clock, and a jury was empanelled as under, to try the above case. King is a little man, with a smirking air, and not very bloodthirsty look. He is a native of County Westmeath, Ireland, and does not appear to be more than thirty-five. From some facts which we have gathered out of depositions taken before the Coroner but not produced on the trial, we ascertain that the prisoner has been somewhat cosmopolitan in his habits; and his excessively civilized air would strengthen the belief that he must have largely seen the world. In this City he had served in the capacity of waiter. The frail fair one who would seem to have been the primary cause "of all this woe," is an Englishwoman, and was married to the prisoner in St. George's Church, Hanover-square, London, about four years ago. So she says herself, at least. The offence with which the prisoner was charged, was committed on the 5th July last, at his residence in Mulberry-street. In his statement he virtually admitted the charge, but urged in extenuation that the act was done in self-defence. We annex his declaration in full:

STATEMENT OF PRISONER BEFORE THE CORONER.

I am not guilty of intentionally killing Mr. Redding; he came to my house on the day named, and when I had got there at about 10½ o'clock, A. M., I found him drinking brandy and smoking alone with my wife in my room. A difficulty arose between myself and wife which occasioned some words, when Redding interfered and said he would take her part. He then throttled me and shoved me. I then put him out of my room and shut the door; he again forced his way into the room, and rushed upon me, saying he would break my d— neck. I then told him he must leave the room; he would not, but attacked me again by the throat, and I then struck him solely in my self-defence. The deceased was very drunk at the time.

(Signed) HENRY KING.

The following gentlemen constituted the Jury:

Albert McCord,	Martin Bryrich,
Denis Landers,	Joseph W. Clowes,
Anthony Stupp,	Warren A. Griffin,
Benjamin N. Roach,	John Cunningham,
Francis W. Lasak,	Daniel Moran,
Robert Martin,	Geo. McCullough.

The District Attorney, in opening the case for the prosecution, stated the allegations against the prisoner as they appear in the evidence subjoined, but he was unprepared as yet to say whether he should ask to have the prisoner indicted for murder or manslaughter, and would leave that to be determined by the evidence produced in the course of the case.

Anne Gray, sworn—I lived at No. 46 Mulberry-street on the 5th of July last; I knew the prisoner at the bar, but I did not know Timothy Redding; the prisoner lived in the rear of No. 46, first floor; he had resided there for four or five months; I saw him on the 5th July, between 11 and 12 o'clock in the morning, standing in his own door; I did not hear him talk, but I heard talking down stairs on the floor below me; I did not know either of the voices which I heard; I went down stairs, but did not see the prisoner; he was inside, and had the door and shutters closed; then I went up stairs, and on going up I saw the deceased and Mrs. King talking in the yard; the prisoner opened the door and struck deceased with an axe two or three times; the weapon was neither very large nor very small, but one of the kind used for cutting small wood; the deceased was standing by the door when struck; the prisoner stood in his own door; not more than two or three minutes elapsed from the time the prisoner opened the door until he struck the blows; I think he held the axe in his right hand.

Q.—What was the length of the handle? A.—About that length (measuring about a foot on her arm.)

District Attorney—(To the Jury)—I think, gentlemen, you will see that the weapon must have been an axe.

Mr. Spencer—Mr. King says it was not more than a pound weight.

Prisoner—It was not more than half a pound.

Witness continued—The deceased had his face toward the prisoner when the latter struck him; the prisoner with held him (prisoner) by the arms, endeavoring to prevent him inflicting the blows on the deceased; as the prisoner aimed the blows deceased went back, and finally fell down in the yard; the prisoner then retired to his room; Mrs. King ran up to the injured man and began to inflict vengeance on him, until the M. P. (police officer) came up; whilst the blows were being struck I did not hear any words said by either; deceased said nothing when he fell; I could have heard him if he had; he did not move after he fell.

Here a small axe, such as is ordinarily used for chopping wood, was produced, which the witness said resembled the one with which prisoner struck the deceased.

Witness resumed; Mrs. King told the prisoner not to strike whilst he was inflicting the blows.

Q.—Did she tell him not to strike before the first blow or after the first blow?

Mr. Spencer objected. She had already answered the question, substantially.

The District Attorney observed that the counsel had a singular facility of objecting to testimony when it was likely to prove disadvantageous to him; that, however, was not the way to administer justice.

Mr. Spencer contended in reply that the question put had not only been answered in substance, but as it was now put, it was leading; therefore he objected.

The District Attorney wished to know why the counsel should object to the putting of a question to which an answer had already been returned. He claimed, besides, that it was leading; he was a public prosecutor, and had no sympathy one way or another, and his question was intended to elicit the truth, and not defeat justice.

Question permitted by the Court.

Witness replied—She (Mrs. King) asked him not to strike again after he had inflicted the first blow.

Cross-Examined by Mr. Spencer—I am owner of the premises which the prisoner occupied in part; I had known him before this for four or five months; he was a quiet man.

Q.—What was the prisoner's general state of health at this time?

The District Attorney objected, and the question was withdrawn.

Witness proceeded: The voices I heard down stairs before this affair happened, proceeded from Mr. King's room; I did not hear angry voices. [Here a deposition taken before the Coroner was handed to the witness.] I do not know whether that is my mark or no; I cannot write; I was sworn before the Coroner; I stated to him that I heard Kinsle voice and that of another man in his room, and King appeared to be angry.

Q.—On coming down stairs did you observe whether this strange man and Mrs. King were under the influence of liquor?

The District Attorney objected to the question as having no bearing on the case.

A somewhat protracted discussion, for and against the admissibility of the question proposed, here ensued, and the Court excluded it for the present.

Witness resumed—I heard King's wife and the other man also talk loudly; it was about ten minutes after that that I went down stairs; I swore before the Coroner that when I got down stairs to the yard I saw the deceased and Mrs. King standing in conversation near the back entrance or hall door; I do not know what they said, but I asked Mrs. King what caused the noise; she said it was no harm; that the man with her was talking her part, and that she had no one to speak for her; King was not with them when I came down stairs; they seemed standing more than two paces from the door, where the blows were struck, and just inside the hall door; I said to Redding that it was time for us to go away, and not to say one word more; he said nothing to me in reply; I heard him say nothing to the yard; he did not say to me that "he would not go away, unless he had broken the King's neck."

The District Attorney examined this deposition as very material.

Mr. Spencer stated that that objections should be raised to specific interrogatories.

Q. Did you see Redding from the time he was talking to Mrs. King, till he came up to King's door? A. Yes; he walked to King's door; I was going up the stairs at this time, and had got up as far as three steps, when I turned round and looked back; the door was just being opened by King; I was within two or three minutes after I saw Redding talking with Mrs. King in the yard, when I saw King open his door; I heard nothing said in that interval; King struck the blows immediately after the other, in succession; I had never seen Redding there before.

Re-examined by the District Attorney—King's door opened into the entry; when he struck Redding he was standing in his own door in the entry; Redding stood in the hall; Redding and Mrs. King, when they were talking together, stood in the yard; when King opened the door, Mrs. King was going in, and on the other man going in after her, King struck him.

Catherine Van Alten sworn—I occupied the third floor in the front of No. 46 Mulberry-street; I knew the prisoner at the bar by sight, but did not know Redding; I saw Mrs. King strike Redding three times with the axe; the axe was like that produced; when she struck deceased it was out in the yard washing; I saw Redding about two minutes before he got the first blow; I had been washing in the yard that morning from about 8 o'clock; deceased, when I first saw him, was standing in the hallway at King's door; his face was turned towards King going in; King told him to go out; Redding refused, and gave bad answers in reply; he threatened King about his wife; told him that Mrs. King was a good woman, and that he (King) should not say anything against her; King said he had nothing to say to her; no more words and until the blows commenced; every blow of the axe that Redding got he recreated further towards the entry door; King followed, striking him as he went; King had one foot inside and the other outside his own door when he struck the first blow; when he struck the last blow he was at the flag of the entry door; after the last blow was struck, the deceased fell down on the grating over the cellar in the yard; he fell on his feet; he was dragged up with his head resting within the entry and his feet outward; "it is no use doing anything with me," he said, "my brain is fractured;" I observed the blood flowing from the wounds in his head; he had his face to the prisoner whilst the latter was striking him; deceased was drunk at the time; there was no person in the yard but me when the man was killed; Mrs. King came out through the hall after he fell; she had been going up stairs, I think, when the occurrence happened; afterwards, the policemen came and tied up Redding's head with a handkerchief of his neck, and then took him away.

Cross-examined by Mr. Spencer—I was not examined at the Coroner's Inquest; I did not know much about Mr. King; I will only be five months in that house next week; I did not see Redding before that day; he might have crossed the yard before I saw him struck without my observing him, but I did not see him; I heard a noise in King's room shortly before this occurrence; I heard Redding give King abusive words.

Q.—Tell us the precise words. We must have them.

Witness—They were not very decent.

District Attorney—If she repeats them to your Honor in a low tone of voice we can have them from your minutes.

The witness accordingly communicated with his Honor.

His Honor, after her statement was taken, said the words employed were not very decent, but it was right that the Jury should hear them. Witness had informed him that if Redding told King repeatedly to kiss his ass—said that Mrs. King was a good woman, and that he should not abuse her, and made use of indecent answers and expressions.

Cross-examination resumed—I heard Redding tell King that he would break his neck; Redding came out, and the door was shut after him; he went back again; I did not see the door when it was opened; Redding was talking loudly when Mrs. Grey came out; the blows which King struck were given in rapid succession; Redding was drunk; I think King had he had been drinking that morning; I saw King sitting at the table with a glass of brandy and water near him; I had given Mrs. King a tumbler of ice water to mix with it, but I did not see King drink; when Redding fell on his back on the grating, King came up and turned him on his side; Mrs. King drew him inside the door, with his head within the hall.

Examined by the District Attorney—The table at which King sat was at the window; I saw no one there but himself, but I heard a strong voice, which I believe was a man's; the brandy was in a tumbler before King.

Q.—Did Mrs. King come to you for the iced water before or after you saw that brandy there?

Mr. Spencer objected.

Objection overruled.

Witness replied: It was before I saw the brandy there that Mrs. King asked me for the iced water; she went inside with it; I heard loud words before that, but I could not say whether they were angry words; I did not see King take hold of the glass or have it in his hand; I did not take notice when he arose from his chair; it was nearly a quarter of an hour from the time that Mrs. King had gone in with the water, until I heard the angry talk; in the commencement, the conversation was not angry, but it was loud; at times during the fifteen minutes, the talk appeared to be civil, at other times loud.

Q.—Did you hear Mr. King talk civilly?

Mr. Spencer objected to the question as leading.

The District Attorney said that if it was leading it had grown out of his (Mr. Spencer's) own cross-examination.

Question allowed.

Witness said, Yes, when Mrs. King went in with the water the talk was civil, but it afterwards grew loud; then deceased was pretty drunk; he spoke so insultingly that I was led to think so.

Recross-examination by Mr. Spencer—Where I was washing was not more than as far as from here to the railing (about twenty feet) off the entry door; King's window was open, and I heard the voices through it; I heard no conversation before Mrs. King got the water; it was about five minutes after the water was got that I noticed the conversation; I saw Mr. King sitting at the table about a minute before I gave his wife the water.

To the District Attorney—There was no entrance from King's room to the yard but the window, and the entry.

To the Court—I remained all the morning in the yard, but twice I went for soap.

Mary Redding—A lady whose intensely immobile features were twisted into a most tragicomical expression of sorrow, testified as follows: I knew Timothy Redding; he was my brother; he was hurt on the 5th July last; I saw him between 9 and 10 A. M.; he went out from me; I saw him again after he was hurt, in the Hospital; it was between 1 and 2 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day; the officer came for me; I saw him very near every day before he died; he lived one month and a day; I went to the Hospital to see him that day; I says to him, says I—

Mr. Spencer objected to that, as it could not be evidence.

The District Attorney said he proposed to show that Redding was about to die, and knew it.

Witness—Yes, he did.

Mr. Spencer said that was not the way to prove a dying declaration, by giving something that he said the day he was struck. If a physician had advised him, "Sir, you must die; you have wounds which will produce death," it would be admissible. Instead of this, he had merely said to his sister, that he was going to die. This evidence was without law and without reason, and never should be admitted.

The District Attorney said he was going on to show that this man considered himself in articulo mortis, and there was also other evidence in the case to show that the deceased knew his dying condition.

By the District Attorney—Did you have conversation with him about his health? A.—Yes; he was in very bad health; when I went to see my brother that day he said to me that Henry King was the cause of his death.

By the Court—Did he say any thing else to you about the cause of his death?

Witness—He said he was dying and Henry King was the cause of it.

By Mr. Spencer—Nobody else was present when he said he was dying; no physician was there; he lived about a month, but he got better for about a week; he always said he was going to die of the wounds he got from Henry King, and never hoped to get well; he never spoke of the doctor; he always said he was dying of the wounds. [Objected to.]

Mr. Spencer—It is proposed to show the declarations of the man a month before his death, in the face of the fact that for a week he continued to get well. It is not safe to admit declarations made under such circumstances.

The District Attorney contended that there was sufficient proven to allow the declarations of the deceased to be admitted.

Mr. Spencer replied at great length, contending that the question was that of a mere weak-minded person laboring under an indisposition of body, and not of one who had been informed that he was about to die.

The Court said that the language used was sufficiently ambiguous, but it was enough for the Court to hear if and say it before the Jury. If they should believe that the deceased thought he was about to die, they would give him the credit for what he said as if it was said under a full impression that he was shortly to appear before the Almighty.

District Attorney—Go on and state what it was he said.

Witness—I went to the Hospital and I said, "Wade, what has done this to you?" he said, "Henry King;" he said he was approaching his God; I said, "what has done it? what was the reason?" he said Henry King had no reason, he followed him to the door and struck him unarmed with an axe, or a chopper; he could not tell which; the nurse was there, and he did not speak any more to him as he was too far gone; he was laid down here, (putting her hand to the top of her head on the left side.)

Cross-examined—My brother declared to his God that Henry King had no reason for what he had done; he, my brother, knew of no reason, he said, and that King followed him unarmed; I saw a bag or less on his head; I don't know if they performed an operation that day; the nurse was there and he can tell; I went to see him every day, but had no conversation further with him.

Mercer Wright, examined by the District Attorney—I am House surgeon in the New-York Hospital; Timothy Redding was brought there on the 5th July last; he was suffering from a compound fracture of the scull.

Q.—What is a compound fracture? A.—A fracture of the skull with wounds accompanying it; this was a fracture of irregular shape, with a portion of bone depressed of the size of a quarter dollar; it had portions of the bone fractured radiating from that first injury.

Q.—What caused the death of Redding? A.—His death was caused by those injuries; he died the 2d of Aug.; he was partially sensible, when admitted, and somewhat stupefied; he was stupefied the same day he came in.

Q.—What was the effect of the operation on his mind? A.—I don't think the state of his mind was changed by the operation.

The District Attorney—I want to ask the Doctor, as a medical man, what weight he should give to the declaration of a man so situated as to the cause of his injuries—if the declaration was made the same day as the operation was performed.

Mr. Spencer objected, when the Court said that the question was to aid the defence—and the question was not encountering the witness.

The District Attorney handed the matter the evidence, who said that any one of the first surgeons of the city might have performed the injury.

Mr. Spencer—You are, certainly, I suppose, that it was not done with the edge of this axe?

Witness—My impression at the time was that it was done with one of the few corners, and it is so now.

Q.—Was there ever any hope of saving the man? A.—Yes; there is always hope of saving a man on such cases.

Q.—Was he living on the 4th of July? A.—No, Sir.

To the District Attorney—There was a portion of bone depressed about the size of a quarter dollar, and other fractures were diverged which radiated from that fracture; I conceive that he was struck by the corner of this hatchet.

The District Attorney held, "There we rest, Sir."

The Court and Jury then took a recess.

THE DEFENCE.

Mr. Spencer said he should trouble the Court and Jury with a very brief defence of the prisoner at the bar. There was one witness in the city who had not been subpoenaed, and the counsel did not suppose that if the witness was present the theory of the case would be changed. He should, therefore, ask leave of the Court and Jury waiting, but deem the case for the prisoner by calling a witness to his character.

The learned gentleman called the following witness:

Benjamin G. Clark examined: I am one of the proprietors of the Merchants' Hotel, in Cortlandt-street. The prisoner has been in our employ, and we thought him a very well-behaved, peaceable, good man; he was with us about four or five months.

By the District Attorney—(read the account of the murder or manslaughter the day after it occurred, and the prisoner was in the House the day before,) I think, but I am not sure; we have about 40 to 50 hands in the house, and cannot charge my memory about him; I knew nothing further about him than what I observed about the house; I could tell from the books if he was there on the day of July.

Mr. Spencer summed up for the prisoner, contending that in no sense of the term could this be a case of murder, and that it was a case where the unfortunate man, at the Bar had found his hearth and his home made desolate by a stranger, drinking with and debauching his wife, and he had done what every man deserving the name would have done, expelled the drunken and indecent intruder.

The District Attorney said it it was not a case of murder, it was certainly a case of manslaughter in the second degree.

THE CHARGE.

The Court in charging the Jury in this case called their attention to the dying declaration of the prisoner, as testified to by his sister, that he was dying by the hands of Henry King. This might be taken in the sense in which people often when hurt say, I'm killed, but it does not follow that they expect death will immediately follow—it only means that they are in pain and suffering. It may nor be their meaning that in a very short time they will be in the presence of their Maker, but only that they are suffering much pain. The Jury would distinguish between these two meanings, and remember that the prisoner had no opportunity to cross-examine the deceased. If the Jury are not satisfied that the deceased fully expected to die, or that he was not likely to recover, they would give the prisoner the benefit of that doubt. Still, it was not to be supposed that the deceased intended to deceive the Jury, although his statement might not, in their minds, be entitled to the highest degree of credibility. Neither of the parties, in their statements, probably intended to speak a falsehood; when the deceased was asked who has done it, and he said Henry King, and he had no reason for it, the deceased probably meant no reason to use an axe.

His Honor then read the statement of the prisoner, and said that, taking into consideration that both these persons were under great excitement, it was rather remarkable they should have agreed so entirely upon the facts.

If the prisoner found the deceased in his room using indecent language, he had an undoubted right to put him out, using no more force than was necessary, and the law would protect him in that right, provided he used no more force than was necessary; but did he not use more force than was necessary? So if the the deceased returned, the prisoner would have the right to repel him, but if the Jury should be of opinion he used a dangerous weapon in a cruel manner, it would be manslaughter, and if used with the intent to kill the man, it would be murder. The law in civil cases undoubtedly is that for mere abuse a man has no right to return blows, but the abuse would be taken by the Jury in mitigation of damages. So in criminal cases you have a right to consider the abuse for the purpose of mitigating the crime.

His Honor referred to the statutory provisions regarding murder and manslaughter, and the Jury retired at 4½ o'clock, and after an hour came into Court with a

VERDICT,

Guilty of Manslaughter in the Second Degree.

SENTENCED.

The prisoner was immediately called up and sentenced to the State Prison for five years.

Sentence of Jerome B. King for Stabbing Peter G. Fest.

The Court directed this prisoner to be arraigned in the usual form, and His Honor said: Prisoner, you have been found guilty of Manslaughter in the Third Degree. The law fixes the punishment at not less than two years in the State Prison, and not exceeding four years. There were extenuating circumstances in your case; you were proved to have borne a good character; you are very young, and not to be compared in size or strength with the man who had struck you; but the Court cannot forget that you seized a weapon of a dangerous character, one which you had no right to use even in your own defence, much less to assail another with. The Court, therefore, feels bound to adjudge you to three years in the State Prison. Although the Jury did recommend you to mercy, it is proper that the Executive should take that into his consideration, and if mercy should be extended to you, it is for him to shorten your punishment, and not for this Court to do more than carry out the law.

The prisoner was then removed to the Tombs, and was sent up to Sing Sing by the evening train of cars.

The Court stands adjourned to the first Monday in November.

COMMON PLEAS—TUESDAY.

Before Judge Daly.

POLITICAL LIBEL ON AN EX-ALDERMAN.

Thomas J. Burr vs. Henry Erben.—At the opening of the Court yesterday a large audience was in attendance to hear the speech of Mr. J. T. Brady, on the part of the plaintiff. The learned gentleman occupied the attention of the Court and Jury for about an hour and a half.

THE CHARGE.

In submitting the law of the case to the jury, the learned Judge said that the charge on which the action was brought was substantially this: That Mr. Barr, the plaintiff, was one of the most corrupt members of the Common Council; that he sold two police appointments to members of that body, and a specific charge that he sold a particular appointment to an officer of the name of Smith. In proof of this several witnesses have been examined who were present at the meeting convened at the house of Mr. Booth, to take into consideration certain measures in respect to the reform of the City Government, or, at all events, associated for the consideration of affairs appertaining to the City, and political matters. Mr. Baxter, one of the persons who were present, states what was said by Mr. Erben in the course of some remarks addressed by him formally to the Chairman of that meeting, and heard by all the persons who were there assembled. He (the learned Judge) referred to his testimony in the first place, because he stated more fully and particularly what Mr. Erben did say. Mr. Erben, according to him, in the course of his remarks had said: "See what a damned rascal you have got for an Alderman of this Ward. See how he has made his money by selling appointments to pass and for from $1 to a $100." He said "do know the case where he (Barr) was paid $100, and the man did not get the appointment." That was the broadest statement by any of the witnesses which Mr. Erben was alleged to have uttered at that meeting. The distinction between Mr. Baxter and the other witnesses appeared to be that they were rather giving their impressions of the substance of what was said, whilst Mr. Baxter appeared to give it in the order of discourse, inasmuch as it was given by him in the first person, as he alleged it came from the mouth of Mr. Erben. Mr. Pease stated that he asked Erben if he could prove what he said, and he (Erben) replied that he could, and this witness (Pease) being further interrogated on his cross-examination, said that he could not say positively that Erben said he knew what he said to be true, but the impression of the witness was, that he said he knew it and could prove it. After referring to the evidence of the other witnesses in reference to this point, the Judge proceeded to remark that it appeared from this testimony that, at all events, Mr. Erben upon that occasion declared Mr. Barr was a corrupt member, or one of the most corrupt members of the Common Council; that he had sold Police appointments at all prices, from $5 to $100, and that if Mr. Baxter's statement was correct, he had made a specific charge in a particular case. Now, this general charge of corruption, associated with a specific charge of the sale of public offices in the city, as a member of the Common Council, was a charge that, if true, would subject Mr. Barr to indictment for a misdemeanor. This was a charge of no grave and serious character as not only to subject the party to public punishment, but one, perhaps, eminently disgraceful, for it was substantially alleged that what should be the disinterested exercise of the power of appointment for the public good, was done with a single eye to his own pecuniary profit and benefit; that he procented in this instance an example in the discharge of a public trust the most pernicious to the community, and, perhaps, the most disastrous in its results, that could be presented in a Government like ours. One of the charges brought against the Republican form of Government, was the facility that it presented for corrupting or bribing those who discharge important public trusts. The freest and most enlightened nation of antiquity was not exempt from this charge, was not exempt from the general charge of the corruption of its; while men from the highest to the lowest offices, and in a Government like ours, the proposal to take advantage of the position we have conferred upon them for their own benefit, was a charge which they were entitled to have some notice. The mere oath and word of an individual was sufficiently unfortunate, in connection with the example and effect of one who in the discharge of a public trust plundered, sacrificed, and, instead of acting for the public good, converted a public station into a means for his own benefit and profit. There could be no doubt, therefore, that a charge of this kind made by words, was of a sufficiently grave and serious character to warrant an action for damages. It was conceded that the charge made should be one for which the party could be indicted, or at least one involving moral turpitude; and in this case the charge, if true, was one that would subject Mr. Barr to an indictment. It was not only one of moral turpitude, but in a public view, perhaps one of the most shameful and could be affixed to a public man.

Now, such being the character of this publication, defendant said in his defence, in the first place, he had a right to make it; that whether it was true or not, he was a candidate for a public office, and that it was spoken of him in reference to his character as a candidate for that office at a private meeting of a few citizens who had come together to consider the political condition of the city—a matter in which they had a common interest as citizens, that is, to take measures for effecting a reform in the city government. And he (defendant) said in addition to that, that if he were not exempt by the nature of the occasion, that, as a matter, the charge made by him was true. In respect to the first ground of the defence in this suit, it was usual in actions of this kind to spread it upon the record, to set up a defence that protection or privilege, to show the circumstances, which constituted the privilege. That had not been done in this case, and it therefore became his duty to say to them (the Jury) that unless it should appear to the jury from the evidence given upon the trial that the words were spoken under the circumstances, they would not be justified in taking this question of privileged into consideration. But if it appeared that in the course of the uttering of the words given in the evidence on the part of the plaintiff that it was under circumstances that constituted Mr. Erben, or relieved him from all responsibility, then the question of privilege became material. Now, there were certain communications whether true or false, that were regarded as privileged; that is, they might not be true, but still the circumstances under which they were uttered operated as a protection to the person who uttered them, and through whom they might actually injure, seriously injure the character of the person against whom they were directed, still, if they were uttered under such circumstances, and were not dictated by a purely malevolent motive, no responsibility attached the uttering of them. This privilege existed where what was written or spoken, or published, was done in the discharge of some legal or moral duty, but if a communication presumptively privileged was made from private malice, or to gratify personal revenge, it did not cover by its ostensible privilege the party who made it. If a man were asked the character of a servant, and he replied that he had reason to believe that the servant was a thief, that he had stolen certain articles—his spoons for instance,—and that he discharged him in consequence, the charge might be entirely untrue, yet inasmuch as it was communicated in good faith, and not voluntarily, but to a person desiring that information whom it was important should be correctly informed, the individual who gave it in good faith, who was not actuated by a malevolent motive to injure the servant, but who was stating what he truly believed, and which he felt it to be his duty to communicate, was to be excused and protected. To illustrate this more generally: Where a communication is made to the appointing power in respect to the appointment of a particular person to office when any citizen supposes so to be unfit or disqualified for it, whatever that citizen thus communicates to the appointing power, is regarded as privileged, unless a malevolent motive is shown. Now this privilege, continued the learned Judge, must be understood as extending in some degree to what a citizen says respecting the fitness or qualifications of a candidate for election for an office of honor or profit. In further explanation of this he would take the liberty of reading to them the remarks of a Judge whose name had frequently been mentioned in the trial of this cause, and who was certainly one of the most clear-headed and distinguished lawyers which this country ever possessed. Chief Justice Parsons said that "when any man shall consent to be a candidate for a public office conferred by the election of the people, he must be considered as putting his character in issue, so far as it may respect the fitness and qualifications for the office; and publications of the truth on this subject with the honest intention of informing the public, are not libellous; for it would be unreasonable to conclude that the publication of truth, which is in fact the interest of the people to know, should be an offence against their laws; and every man holding a public elective office may be considered as within this principle, for as a restriction is the only way by which his constituents can manifest their approbation of his conduct, it is to be presumed that he is consenting to a reelection if he does not resign it, for every good man would wish the approbation of his fellow citizens for meritorious conduct. For the same reason, the publication of falsehood and calumny against candidates for public offices, is an offence against both the individual and the community, and deserves punishment, inasmuch as the public may be deceived into respecting a good man, &c." Now, this was more fully expressed in a case determined in the State of South Carolina, in which the Judge who delivered the judgement of the Court, after a very full deliberation, asserted the privilege of every man to canvass and discuss the qualifications of a candidate for a public office, and concluded by stating that "the ordeal of public scrutiny, though it is at any time a disagreeable and painful operation, is yet the result of that freedom of speech which is the necessary attribute of a free Government." Now, while a certain privilege must undoubtedly exist in regard to what a man might say or express in respect to a candidate for a public office, to be elected by the suffrages of his fellow citizens, it had its limits. It was, perhaps, very difficult to assign it limit of that kind. It was difficult so to adjust the rules of law, that while they should leave the citizens fairly at liberty to comment upon the qualifications and fitness for office of public men, they should, at the same time, preserve the individual from unfounded calumny and unjust aspersions. It was exceedingly difficult to draw that line. Nothing was perfect here; and the law, perhaps, was somewhat imperfect in that respect. He supposed, however, that "whatever a citizen—an elector—expressed, in respect to the fitness or capacity, or even the moral character—for that is, I embraced in the general term—of a candidate for office, as a matter of opinion, he would be justified in stating it. He would not only be justified in stating it, but he was called upon on a case if the opinion was fairly and generally believed; and he might go still further, he, (the learned Judge,) supposed, and state the grounds of that opinion. He might even in doing so, repeat what he had heard from others respecting the candidate; he might even refer to matters of general rumor in respect to the candidate. But if he made a specific charge against the individual who was up for office, not as a matter of hearsay, but as of his own knowledge when he said that he knew it or could prove it, the case was very different; it was no longer matter of opinion; it was no longer matter of hearsay; it was no longer matter of general rumor, in which he, in common, with his fellow-citizens might have a joint interest, but it was assuming upon his part the responsibility of the truth of that charge, staking his own personal character in support of it, and publishing it to the injury and detriment of the individual it referred to. No man could be justified in going to that extent. This was, perhaps, again better expressed by the eminent Judge to whom he (the presiding Judge) had referred, than he, himself, could express it. The speaker again quoted from Chief-Justice Parsons

To Correspondents.

We have received a number of articles in reply to the communications lately published in the TIMES concerning the recent action of the Grand Council of the Order of Know-Nothings. We shall willingly give place to anything that may come to us from reliable authority in correction of any misstatements, or within proper limits, in reply to any arguments which that correspondent or any other may bring forward. But without an exception, all the professed replies that have reached us are devoted exclusively to denunciations of the writer in question for having broken his oath and committed sundry other enormities, in the exposure of the secrets of the Order, of which he is assumed to have been guilty. All this is his business—not ours, nor the public's. Nor do we see any good result that could be reached by the publication of such personal vituperation, whether it be well founded or not. We repeat we shall gladly give place to any correction or contradiction of misstatements he may have made,—but must decline publishing articles which do not even allege that his allegations are in any particular untrue.

The European News.

The steamship Washington, from Bremen, via Southampton, arrived and anchored off Sandy Hook at 11 o'clock last evening. She brings four days' later intelligence from Europe, a brief summary of which we publish this morning, as received by telegraph. There is nothing either startling or important in the news. We are informed that a lack of cavalry was all that prevented the English and French forces from completely annihilating the Russian Army at Alma. No official dispatches had been received relative to the battle of Alma, but it is stated on what is considered good authority, that the English had 2,000 men killed and wounded, and the French 1,400.

Marshal St. ARNAUD is dead, and Gen. CANROBERT is chief in command.

Mazzini and Switzerland.

MAZZINI—probably somewhat frightened by the late efforts of the Swiss authorities to lay hands on him in his journey through the Cantons, by "underground railway"—has been writing to them a very taunting letter, which we gave in the columns of the TIMES last week. He has been bitter with them, but not "passing short." His epistle is as long as it is sarcastic. He argues for the purpose of making the Government ashamed of its present conduct respecting the exiles of other nations, in contrast with the antecedents, republican pretensions and so forth, of that craggy and courageous little nation; and we are all disposed to assent to what he says, in a general way. But then, a second thought brings broader considerations. Portia says, very well—"Nothing is true, I see, but with respect." And, in respect of the state of Europe, we are disposed to say a word for poor Switzerland in this matter. What can the Federation do? It stands alone in Europe—the sole exception to the general despotism reigning and governing there. These are not the middle ages, in which the Federation cut such an independent figure. In those old times, standing armies were not, and the power of kings was everywhere divided and weakened by the wholesome insubordination of the feudal chieftains. The principal of monarchical government, as everybody may see, has grown strong with the progress of civilization—as it is called. The arts and the science of despotism have improved with the improvements of steam, electricity, school education, philanthropy, and so forth. The kings of to-day are surrounded by vast standing armies, and no power or order comes between them and their opponents—that is, the mass of the people and the hated principle of popular liberty. Europe is, at this moment, kept down and kept in order by two millions of armed soldiers, assisted by railways, the electric telegraph, and all the wonderful discoveries of chemistry; and the rulers are perfectly agreed in their hostility to the existence or spread of republicanism. In the midst of them stands Switzerland—alone.

Half a century ago the case was different. She then had Holland, Genoa and Venice to keep her in countenance and good heart; for Europe then had a semblance of liberty to boast—a gleam of the old Republican light to look at. In 1819 the Holy Alliance changed all that. It was announced and believed that the former political order and boundaries of Europe were to be restored, and the dread spell-work of the French Empire reversed. But that was a very bitter jest; for these three Republics aforesaid, overthrown by the self-will of NAPOLEON, arose no more. There was no restoration for them. It was well understood among those Holy Allies, (the term bears the impress of its Russian origin, having been suggested by the Czar-Pontiff ALEXANDER,) that Republics were to be wholly discountenanced, and so they were, as all the world saw—and shall still see. These sacred regulators even tried, at that time, to put a stop to the progress of young Republicanism in this hemisphere. It was proposed to aid Spain against her colonies; but the genius of England—that Democratic genius which counteracts in so many ways the influence of her aristocracy, and will yet place that nation right side up in the world—stood in the way of such a proceeding. The plebeian GEORGE CANNING boasted that he would bring a new world into existence to redress the balance of the old—which meant, to buy largely the English manufactures, untrammeled by the tariffs of old Spain!—and Mexico was preserved from the destiny of Brazil—if, indeed, we can say that Mexico has been preserved at all. The French Government at that time intrigued with ROMDAN, the Director of the Banda Orientale, and the Half-Bourbon Duke of LUCCA was proposed as the King of the country, his Queen to be a Brazilian Princess. This change was discussed in the Argentine Confederation in 1819. A similar intrigue was carried on by ROSSNAV in Chili, the Government of which, under PYNANCOR, actually agreed to that scheme of monarchy on several conditions, viz.: the consent of all the Great Powers, marriage with a Brazilian Princess, union with the Banda Oriental and Paraguay, &c. This grand project was knocked on the head by the Montoneras in 1820. But it had been vigorously prosecuted by those in the French interest, whose policy was that lately followed by DOMMARTIN and BOULNOY.

Such was the spirit of the time when the Holy Alliance was making its settlements; and these facts prove the long-cherished determination of the European monarchies to put down republicanism whenever and wherever they can, as a post and a nuisance. Thus it is that Switzerland stands alone—the object of their distrust and dislike, and only preserved from the fate of Poland by the difficulty which the jealous great powers would experience in cutting up her Cantons for distribution. She enjoys, apparently, the grace once accorded by the Cyclops to Ulysses—that he should be the last to be devoured—and will be sent after the other Republics into limbo, very probably, unless something extraordinary should prevent it. MAZZINI should recollect these things. It is to no purpose that he, or, let us suppose, any stray democrat from our shores, shall taunt the Cantons—"with the license of ink"—or get the better of them in abstract argument. What can the Federation do, with NAPOLEON sternly menacing it on one side, FRANCIS JOSEPH doing the same on the other, and Prussia, as ready as either of them to fall upon the Republic and appropriate the Canton she has been so long growling about? Switzerland is really helpless; no Republic is nigh, to reflect back her Democracy and give assurance for assurance. The only other thing of the kind in Europe is that wild mountain polity on its very frontier, where the Imaun SCHAMYL so well sustains a predatory, sacerdotal system among the steppes and pinnacles of the Caucasus; and Heaven knows if that ecstatic Republic of his will be recognised in the end, and able to preserve its independence! European diplomacy is an unprincipled and treacherous thing. MAZZINI, we perceive, quotes for himself, against Switzerland, the famous words of LUTHER: "Hier stehe ich; ich kan nicht anders—Gott helfe mir!" But poor Switzerland may as justly and truly quote them for her own behoof. There she stands—obliged under coercion to temporise and compel the conspirators of liberty to leave her soil; she cannot do otherwise, God help her! While the Democracies of Europe are quietly endorsing their despotisms, and making no efforts against them, it is unreasonable to ask that Switzerland shall rashly defy such dangerous enemies, and peril her existence, seeing that the tyrants in her neighborhood would ask but a pretext to annihilate her, or turn her into a constitutional monarchy; in which case the strong outcry of our republican press could scarcely save her.

It is of no use to talk to Switzerland. She refuses to play a desperate part. If liberty depends on what the Cantons will do, her case is a bad one. These Cantons are a fortress of republicanism which will be useful yet, in the day of earnest and general struggle; but it were an insane policy to provoke prematurely those who could crush them. They will do their part when the time comes. Meantime, let the Italian people begin—the honor of the last initiative was theirs; let the French rise again, at the signal, and the Democracy of Germany take up the military chorus. Unterwalden, if called on in the melee, will sound a forest horn, for accompaniment, as unequivocally and gallantly as of old.

Dr. Bridgman and the Chinese Rebellion.

We have already alluded to a deeply interesting paper from the pen of Rev. Dr. BRIDGMAN, who accompanied our Minister McLANE on his late visit to Nankin, in the Susquehanna. We find the document published at length in the China Mail of August 3. It gives details—generally facts of his own observation—as to the character and creed of the Insurgents, in which the politician and moralist are equally interested. The impressions made by the early accounts are generally confirmed, though the tone is more subdued, and the religious coloring, to a large extent, fades out.

The Insurgents' Government, according to Dr. BRIDGMAN, is a theocracy. They believe that they are ushering in a new dispensation. Their leader is a kind of Moses, raised up by the Deity for their direction. Their leader sometimes ascends to the Deity for consultation—sometimes he descends to them.

Their Government is a mixture of politics and religion; and, moreover, is a royal despotism. No Emperor, but a fraternity of Kings, six in number, preside over the Empire. The first of these is called the Heavenly King, but whether he is or is not now in the flesh seems matter of doubt. The six are said to reside in Tienking, the Heavenly Capital, though where that is we cannot guess. The claim these six put forth is not over the territory that lies within the old wall, nor to the control of the Empire only; but it is universal. We of the Western Continent are their rightful subjects, and we all owe them tribute.

The Doctor notes particularly the energy of the insurgents. Some six years since they struggled into existence in the Kwangsi (Quanse?) District, one of the most southern districts of China, and west of Canton. There they gained victories which were indeed insignificant at first, but spreading along the course of the rivers north and east, conquering at almost every point they are at this moment in possession of the better part of China, holding most of the largest cities, and over the rest hovering perpetually, a constant terror to the imperialists and the people.

"They said they had undisputed control from Chinkiang-fu four hundred miles up the Great River; and that, besides the large numbers of troops garrisoned and entrenched about Chinkiang, Kwachau, and the "Heavenly Capital," they had four armies in the field, carrying on active aggressive operations; two of these had gone northward, one along the Grand Canal and one farther westward; they were designed to cooperate, and, after storming and destroying Peking, to sweep westward and march through Shensi, Shansi, Kansuh, into Sz'chuen, where they are expected to meet their other two armies, which from Kiangsi and the Lake provinces are to move up the Great River and along through the region to its southern bank."

The most remarkable order prevails in their ranks. Tobacco, strong drink, and opium are prohibited.

Their religious creed recognises many of the doctrines of the Bible, but the State is the only Church they seem to admit. They have nothing that reminds one of the Lord's Supper, but they speak of a form of Baptism. Our Saturday, they keep as a Sabbath,—a day for abstinence from labor and sport, and for devotion to prayer, thanksgiving and worship. The Bible in use is GUTZLAFF'S version. They hold to one God, reject the equality of the Son with the Father, ignore the inspiration of the Scriptures, and in their Doxology speak of one of the Six Kings as the Holy Spirit. They have a list of twenty books or more which are published by authority; but of their literary abilities the doctor speaks less highly than we were hearing him two years ago.

He thinks their success in breaking up the present dynasty is inevitable, but doubts if they will succeed in establishing a prosperous empire upon the ruins. Their pretensions are considerably too grave to suit foreigners. The Doctor answers to his own question, whether, if they become masters of the Middle Kingdom, they will recognize the existing treaties between the Empire and England, France and the United States, "Most assuredly they will not, 'unless" (and the exceptions damage the force of the opinion,) "on compulsion, or unless they willingly descend from their high position." These opinions of Dr. BRIDGMAN are entitled to the more weight from the well-known sympathy that he has before indulged for the rebels. The China Mail charges some of his present more sanguine and hopeful views to a misconstruction of their books and ignorance of the early career of the "Heavenly King." Is it possible, after all, that HUMPHREY MARSHALL knew what he was about?

Thanksgiving Ahead.

Three States have appointed the annual Thanksgiving to take place of the 30th of November; a fourth—Maryland—has fixed upon the 23d. Doubtless now the usual lamentation will be taken up that all the States do not consent to the observance of the same day. Our eye is not open to any special advantages that would accrue from such a uniformity, though as a matter of taste,—about which wise people never dispute seriously,—we assent to its propriety.

But, on the other hand, there are very good reasons for appointing different days for the festival. Every good man likes to be at his home when the happy occasion comes round; and if he have a father or brother in another State, it is a precious opportunity to spend with them a Thanksgiving and to rejuvenate. There can be no objection to giving us poor sorrow-stricken mortals two glimpses of heaven in a year, and this may be done if our Governor anticipates or falls behind the appointed day in New-England, or some other neighboring States. Then we hold it a duty of every man, wherever born, to go down East and see one Thanksgiving, as it is kept in its purity,—none of your lean, half-Sunday and half work-day arrangements, which children dread because of the meeting, and do not venerate in ignorance of the dinner that should be,—but the institution as our Puritan grand-mothers left it, when the face was drawn straight in the morning that the mouth-corners might curl up the more lovingly when the strain came off at noon.

Again, the market for poultry cannot but be benefited by making two great days of demand rather than by concentrating upon one. The ages of poultry cannot be so exactly regulated as exactly to fit each fowl and turkey for the table upon the same day. Along the lines of the several States the argument will be appreciated. These remarks we make, not in depreciation of uniformity, but as motives for resignation in case there should be more unanimity than is now promised.

"Don't Send a Gentleman to Prison."

It is to be feared that we are decidedly on the high road to becoming terribly aristocratic. True it is, that we have no titular distinctions of Rank, (for our records of Generals, and Colonels, and Majors are nothing, after all,) but an actual distinction is growing up among us, nevertheless. More than forty years ago, Lord RENDSDALE, who had been Lord Chancellor, and was in the way of knowing all about it, emphatically declared, that in Ireland "There was one law for the rich and another for the poor." There are indications that this declaration may be applicable, before long, to our own country.

Last week, a champagne-vender in Wall-street was tried in the Court of General Sessions, before Recorder TILLOU, on an indictment for forging the labels of a particular sort of champagne. After a fair and patient trial, the Jury convicted him of the charge, which is a heavy one, amounting in law to a misdemeanor. Sentence was not passed at the time—why, we know not. On Friday, however, it was stated that the Recorder would sentence the convict to six months' imprisonment. But his Honor was prevailed upon to delay the sentence, as what are called "extenuating circumstances" could be brought forward. On Saturday, this matter of extenuation was exhibited by Mr. TALLMADGE, in the shape of an affidavit by a clerk of the convicted party, that when he sold the wine he informed the purchaser that it was not genuine.

Now, there are several points arising out of this. The first which was taken by the Recorder, was—why was the clerk's evidence not produced until after the trial and conviction? All who are conversant with law proceedings are well aware that while you can cross-examine a witness in the Court, you cannot, on the moment, cross-examine his affadavit. The clerk, of all men living, was the witness for the accused to have called. Why did he pass him over?

The Recorder very fairly remarked—

"That it was beyond all argument that the label on the bottles was a forgery. It was a deception for the purposes of trade—and what was that deception for? Not for the fair uses of trade, but for a deceitful, fraudulent business. The label of SCHREIDER was his reputation, and his reputation was his property. Whether the wine was good or not was not the question. The question was, Why was this label forged? The wine, it had been proved, was placed in empty bottles, bearing this label, and sold as the original wine. This was not done for fair trade, but was a dishonest operation."

One would think that the plain common sense of this was irrefutable. But Mr. TALLMADGE replied—not by an argument, but by a hypothesis. If, said he, you buy a bottle of eau de cologne, though it is in a bottle bearing a foreign label, you know that it was made in America. This, even if true, would be a mere begging of the question, almost too flimsy for notice. Mr. TALLMADGE has himself been Recorder, and would have laughed on the Bench, no doubt, at any such untenable assertion as this, put forward as a substitute for argument and fact. Recorder TILLOU, however, was bewildered by it. Although five minutes before, he had properly stated that the fact at law was not the genuineness of the wine, but of the label, no sooner did he inhale the odor of Mr. TALLMADGE'S eau de cologne than he took a different view, and said that—

"The statute provided that there must be a guilty intent, and that the only means of escape from such implication was the circumstance of the revelation of the real nature of the goods sold whether spurious or otherwise. If the clerk's affidavit were true, the defendant was wrongfully convicted, and injustice had been done him. * * If he was satisfied that BALLIN'S clerk had told KIELER, when he bought the wine, that it was not genuine, he should know what to do. But the evidence showed that the fraud was done deliberately, that there was an intention to deceive, and that there was moral turpitude in the act."

This blowing hot and cold, showing the delightful uncertainty of the judicial mind, still leaves the Recorder's opinion in doubt. The public must patiently wait to see which way the balance turns; for he concluded by saying that—

"Taking all things into consideration, he would look further into the matter, and defer passing sentence till the first day of next term."

It is not easy, under such circumstances, to conjecture what punishment (if any) will be inflicted. On Friday the Recorder was determined to give six months' imprisonment. On Saturday, after reading the affidavit of that disinterested party, the convict's clerk, and listening to the eloquence of Mr. TALLMADGE, he begins to doubt on the subject, and promises to doubt until the first day of next term.

Meanwhile, ex-Recorder TALLMADGE, intimating that the person convicted "imports real champagne in casks to evade the heavy duty charged upon wine imported in bottles," and really thus gives "the identical champagne of the best French vintage," winds up by saying to Recorder TILLOU—

"A gentleman like the defendant, even if guilty, should not be committed to prison. Let him be fined, if you please, but don't send a gentleman to prison."

This is a new doctrine. Imprisonment is too vulgar a punishment for "a gentleman" who is great in Wall-street, and wears broadcloth and fine linen. "Let him be fined, if you please," says the ex-Recorder, "but don't send a gentleman to prison!" How impressive, how touching is the appeal!

In British jurisprudence we recollect only two cases in which the plea of gentility availed. The Duchess of KINGSTON was convicted of bigamy, and Lord BYRON was convicted of the manslaughter of Mr. CHAWORTH. Placed at the bar of the House of Lords, both culprits pleaded the "privilege of the Peerage," and were discharged unpunished. On the other hand, when Earl FERRERS was convicted of the murder of his steward and sentenced to death, the only advantage conceded to him as "a gentleman," was the privilege of being hanged by a silken instead of a hempen rope. And, not two years ago, when Viscount FRANKFORT DE MONTMORENCI was convicted of a misdemeanor, his title and his gentility did not prevent his being clothed in the prison-dress of Newgate, and put to hard labor with other criminals. It is curious to find that, in aristocratic England, a nobleman, albeit "a gentleman," receives the same punishment as a common thief, and to hear it gravely, if not rather imperatively, urged by an ex-Recorder of New-York, that "a gentleman, even if guilty, should not be committed to prison." Fine him, quoth Mr. TALLMADGE; it is only a money payment, which will fall lightly on a rich man "who imports real champagne in casks, to evade heavy duties," but DON'T SEND A GENTLEMAN TO PRISON!

Epidemics in Great Cities.

By the latest official report of the Registrar-General, the cholera was rapidly abating in London. The number of deaths in the last week of September was 754 against 2,050 in the first week of that month. The whole cholera mortality in London in September, was nearly 10,000. This is proportionably much greater than in the corresponding period of 1849—particularly if we add to it the 2,000 deaths from diarrhœa which also took place last month. Twelve thousand a month over and above the ordinary rate of mortality is a fearful discount upon the vitality of London, and should be borne in mind, as a caution and an example in all cities, wherever situated, where there is a large population. Especially so, when, though in a lesser degree, the Cholera has also been destructive in Liverpool, Manchester, Bristol, Sheffield, Birmingham, and several other densely populated cities and towns.

The last visitation of this epidemic was in 1849; it was of longer endurance then and made more victims, but was proportionably less destructive than in September, 1854. On this the Registrar-General pointedly asks:

"Is London to continue every five years to be attacked by pestilence, and to lose so many thousands of its inhabitants? Cannot the conditions in which disease is fatal be determined, and cannot they be removed?"

The question thus put is really as applicable to New-York as it is to London. We are free just now, from any dangerous epidemic. Whenever any thing of the kind does visit us, the best medical talent, experience and skill, are devoted to its cure. What measures do we take, beforehand, for its prevention? It is as notorious as that the sun shines at noon that epidemic diseases are aggravated by uncleanly habits, by foul air, by dirt. There are hundreds upon hundreds of houses in this City, densely inhabited by Irish and German immigrants, (to be distinguished from the emigrants who go up the country,) in which sanitary regulations are wholly neglected—where ventilation is rarely indulged in—where soap, water, and sand-scouring are seldom used.—where, in a word, want of cleanliness, within and without the dwellings, is the rule. These habitations are located in streets which are badly paved and very seldom swept;—in which dirt, and dust, and mud, and decaying vegetable matter, and stagnating water form a compound, most unsavory and unhealthy in fine weather, and a hundred degrees worse when rain or snow, ice and thaw, make the streets nearly impassable. The question arises—cannot these evils be remedied and removed?

The first great step, as it seems to us, is to put the streets in order. Broadway and a few other thoroughfares are admirably paved and can easily be kept clean. But, especially in streets in the vicinity of the water, new pavement must be laid down and extensive repairs made. This done, the Police should rigidly enforce all regulations for keeping the streets clean—but what can we expect when the authorities have allowed the large portion of Broadway opposite the LAZARUS buildings to remain obstructed and nearly impassable, from the accumulation of building materials ever since the early part of last January? The Police certainly have the power of keeping the streets clear, and, to coax them to do their duty, it might be well to bribe them with a good slice of every fine imposed on their information, for obstructing the sidewalks or causeway in any manner. Once get the streets in good condition, the pavement made even, the ruts filled up, and it will be neither difficult nor costly to keep them clean.

All this, even were it accomplished by the accession to office of a really efficient Streets' and Lamps' Commissioner, would yet be inadequate. Not only the streets, but the houses which compose them, should be made and kept clean. We do not see why, in all districts where it is notorious, or even suspected, that the inhabitants grossly neglect the habits of cleanliness which are requisite to keep the City free from epidemics, domiciliary visits should not be made to the houses, with a power, under proper restrictions, to remove and abate all nuisances of the sort. If the public health require such extreme means, they must be had recourse to, no matter what the amount of discontent indulged in thereat by the denizens of dirt. Prevention is the great point, and it cannot be commenced too early.

Comparatively speaking, on an estimate of the population of the two cities, New-York is far more healthy than London. There is no cause, whatever, why New-York should not be as healthy as any great city in the world. But until our streets be repaired and kept in order, and our houses thoroughly cleaned, such a consummation, though it may be devoutly wished, is next to impossible.

Musical.

ITALIAN OPERA.—In consequence of the continued indisposition of Signor MARIO, there will be no opera to-night. It is, we hear, the intention of the management to produce immediately the Opera of "Semiramide." If the costumes and scenery are finished by Monday, there is a probability that this Opera will be given on that day. It is hoped Signor MARIO will then have entirely recovered his health.

NIBLO'S SALOON.—Last evening Mme. ISADORA CLARK gave her first Concert in New-York. It was in every respect an agreeable entertainment, and far superior to the majority of Concerts now so plentifully volunteered by musical aspirants. Mme. ISADORA CLARK possesses a beautiful voice, rich, full and sympathetic. Some cultivation has been bestowed upon it, and it appears to be flexible and easily managed. Beyond this we cannot detect anything that ordinarily pertains to a "Prima Donna." There is an absence of style, method and taste about Mme. CLARK'S vocalization which plainly indicates that she has not yet learned to sing. For instance, the "Casta Diva," last evening, was one of the funniest things we have ever heard in a Concert-room, yet BELLINI did not intend to be comic when he wrote that prayer. The same remark applies to the Cavatina from Sonnambula; and, indeed, to every other Operatic piece. Mme. CLARK has got the first idea of singing Italian music, and if she would win a reputation in New-York she must avoid it. The ballad of "Kathleen Mavourneen" was given with great sweetness, but here again the composer suffered. It was not CROUCH'S music, but Mme. CLARK'S. The delicious sweetness of some of her notes, however, made the audience forgive all errors of commission and omission, and on the whole made them more satisfied than Concert goers usually are. Mme. CLARK'S proper sphere is, we fancy, the Stage,—for she has power combined with sweetness,—but she has much to learn before she can sing Operatic music properly.

Signor GIOVANNI LEONARDI sang a Romanza by DONIZETTI, and an Aria by VERDI. This gentleman possesses a good voice, (nearly a tenor, but trained down,) and sings with discretion. He appeared to be laboring under a cold, and was also nervous. Notwithstanding, Signor LEONARDI won the applause of a large audience.

THE WIDOW OF THE LATE LYSANDER THOMPSON.—We learn, with much satisfaction, that a Committee of gentlemen are now arranging the preliminaries of a Testimonial Benefit to be given on behalf of the widow and family of the late LYSANDER THOMPSON. This benefit was spoken of some months ago, and has already been delayed too long. We hope, in the course of a day or two, to state when and where it will come off.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—The great success of "Maritana," induces the management to give it again to-night, for the last time. Consequently, "Fra Diavolo" will not be produced until to-morrow evening. It is perfectly inexplicable why the latter opera should be given at all just now, when "Maritana" fills the house to overflowing.

A SETTLEMENT OF OUTCASTS.—The Albany Evening Journal gives the following account of squatter sovereignty, near that city: West of this city is a pine plain, several miles in breadth and extending near to Schenectady, little of which is under cultivation. A portion of this tract of land, in the vicinity of the Van Rensselaer Lake, is known as the "Pine Bush," and is more or less settled by "Squatters," who live in huts made of boards, sticks and brush-wood, which are of a diminutive size and very uninviting appearance. Some are constructed on the hill sides, and so formed as to resemble an opening into a cave. They are inhabited by a class of people seldom seen in our city, who are of a filthy appearance, poorly clad, and of a heathenish aspect.

The Chief or Governor of this clan is "Joe Harrington," whom we were wont to see, every Spring, going about the city with a subscription paper in his hand, begging for money with which to buy a horse. The settlement is made up mostly of emigrants, and principally Germans, some of whom do not appear to understand or speak one word of English. The sun never shone upon a more filthy or a more degraded set of human beings; and the only wonder expressed in regard to them is that the police have not been troubled with them before this season. Some of the females were to be seen gathering brushwood and carrying it to their huts, while others were engaged in digging potatoes on farms near the turnpike, several miles distant from their habitation, at a shilling a barrel; but in no instance could a man be found. This probably has been brought about by sending several of them to the Penitentiary for thieving, assisted by the fact that officers were on the track of others who had escaped from justice.

WHITE OR NOT WHITE.—LIZZIE SOUTHARD, a lass of mixed blood, who contends that she is white, will be examined to-morrow before the Mayor, for associating with colored folks. About two weeks ago she had a colored damsel named MATILDA FINNEY sent to the Penitentiary for five years, for stabbing her with a knife on the shoulder, and beating her with a saw on the neck. LIZZIE was much to blame, for she secured into MATILDA'S premises to throw her lover—BOB SMITH—from there. The parties took hold of each arm of his, and were forcing him one from the other, until an affray ensued, which terminated in the stabbing. In the course of the examination into this matter before the Mayor, LIZZIE asserted that she was white, whereupon she was held to answer for the offence of which she now stands charged.—Richmond Whig.

SUGAR IN LIBERIA.—Late accounts from this African Republic say that the culture and manufacture of sugar on the St. Paul's River was rapidly increasing. Fine large cane fields were to be seen on every direction, and during the current season it was thought that fifty sugar farms would be laid out. Some of the new sugar already landed at Monrovia is said to be of a fine quality.

MORE TESTIMONY FROM WISCONSIN AND INDIANA in favor of the great Restorative, HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS, prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON, Philadelphia. They are universally acknowledged to be superior to any other medicine now before the public for the cure of liver complaint, dyspepsia, jaundice, nervous debility, disease of the kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered liver and stomach.

HOLMES KENT & Co., Janesville, Wis., September, 1851, said: "Your German Bitters are selling rapidly here; and among all those we have sold which have given the satisfaction of Hoofland's German Bitters." June 1, 1853, they said: "We recommend them as an invaluable Spring and Summer medicine."

R. CHATFIELD, Esq., Lowell, Dodge Co., Wis., Nov. 1, 1851, said: "Over a year ago I sent some money to you from Canada, and received some of your German Bitters, which I used and found great relief from. My health has improved to such a degree that I am again able to attend to my business. A large number in this place and in the neighborhood have had to send to Milwaukee for the medicine. An agency here would sell large quantities, as I know it to be a sure cure." Chatfield, Ind., Feb. 15, 1853.

DR. JACKSON—Sir: Please send me the other dozen bottles of Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, agreeable to our arrangement. I have received more benefit from what I have taken for the liver and kidney complaint, with which I have been afflicted, than from all other means. Send them any and all other medicines I have taken, put it together.

Respectfully yours,

Temperance and the State Prison.

The following is an extract from the report of W. R. ANDREWS, Warden of the Sing Sing State Prison, made to the Legislature:

"In examining the career of a majority of the convicts, it will be found that young men of good condition, of fair prospects and frequently of superior attainments, have been tempted to immoderate use of ardent spirits, which, when enjoyed in a moderate form, by caution of law, most their intelligence or place of business; an appetite thus thus acquired additional quantities to satisfy its cravings, and in a few years, loss of business, character and means, accompanied with a deprivation of moral and mental resolution, left them to the commission of the offence which either immediately sentenced them to the prison, or drove them from society to perpetrate other and greater crimes. Restored to reason through the aid of prison abstinence, they reflect upon their career with astonishment and sorrow; but their return to the world exposes them to the same temptations, with less character and ability to resist; and after a brief period of imprisonment, they return more hardened in crime, to swell the lists of second convictions. To speculate upon original sin, or natural depravity, in connection with criminal convictions, is simply charging results to an improper cause. Dry up the sources of intemperance which are legalized and countenanced in almost every section of the land, remove that bane of the human race which beset the young man at every step, from the cradle to the grave, allurings him on from error to vice and crime; and it will do much towards rendering the prisons tenantless, and relieving society from the curse and burden of abject poverty and degrading vice."

Letter from Dr. Parker at Canton.

The Boston Traveller has the following extract from a private letter from Dr. PARKER, dated July 16, 1853:

"On the 6th of July, Fishchan, a town 10 or 12 miles west of Canton, embracing nearly a million of people, fell into the power of the insurgents, and the Imperialists have endeavored in vain to recapture it. The smoke by day and fire by night, of burning villages, have been visible from my terrace. On the 13th inst. the first blood was shed on the north of this city, a few miles distant, if we except that spilt by the sword of the executioner, the number of decapitations daily averaging fifty or sixty, and for the last ten years, 50,000. To-day there has been a second battle in this vicinity—sixty-eight insurgents taken prisoners and one hundred slain. Day before yesterday the insurgents were victorious, and 300 Imperialists were killed. It is said some of the captives to-day were brought in on poles, their hands and feet being tied like pigs; others were brought in on the points of sharp bamboos; some have their ears cut off; others are hamstrung. The panic in the city, as the gates were closed during these skirmishes, and the flight of women and children, it is difficult to portray; and from hour to hour we know not what may become the condition of foreigners."

Suicide Epidemic in Kentucky.

The Georgetown Herald, of the current week, narrates the following cases of suicides:

On Oct. 10, Mrs. GUILL, residing in Scott County, aged about 20, hung herself to a tree, and was found dead. Her feet touched the ground as she hung, and the act had evidently been one of steady determination. She had been separated from her husband about a year, and was in poor circumstances.

On the 11th inst., a Mrs. PLUNKETT, residing in Grant County, about 40 years of age, and the mother of nine children, in the absence of her husband, pretended to visit a neighbor, taking with her knitting and a plow line. On the return of the husband, the children's story of the line alarmed him. Search was made, and Mrs. P. was found hung dead—her knitting carefully put aside. Jealousy of her husband is thought to have caused the deed.

On the same day, a Miss WIGGLES, residing in Harrison County, about 15 years of age, shot herself in the head with a rifle, inflicting a shocking, but not immediately fatal wound. She would assign no cause for the act. An acquaintance of a young lady named LOZIER, called to see Miss W., and inquired who shot her. Miss W. evasted of Miss L. a solemn promise to kill the perpetrator of the deed, and then said it was herself and nobody else, and demanded that Miss L. should redeem her promise. Wonderful to relate, on the evening of the day of this interview, Miss LOZIER attempted her own life, by hanging herself to a tree, but was discovered, and cut down in time to save her.—Cincinnati Commercial, 21st.

RIOT IN A COLORED CHURCH.—The neighborhood of the corner of Eleventh and Green-streets was considerably excited night before last, at a sort of "free fight," which took place at the colored church in that vicinity. It seems that the domestic economy of the church has been in a great state of derangement for some time past, owing to a disagreement between certain of the members and their pastor. He has been in the habit, it is stated, of applying offensive epithets to the mass of the congregation, such as pack of liars, thieves, rogues, &c., which gave great offence to many. On the night before last, about 250 persons—not more than one-third of whom were members—assembled to hear an exhortation by the pastor. In descanting on the troubles of the church, he remarked that there were only 12 or 13 persons dissatisfied, and that they caused all the trouble. Some voice in the crowd cried—"Turn them out!" Another voice cried out—"I'll be one among 13 to turn him out!" The noise then became general, and the row began. Pistols were fired, sticks were used freely, and broken heads and cracked shins were plentiful. The fear of the police finally caused the assembly to adjourn in haste. Yesterday there was quite a number of arrests made on charges of disturbing the peace. Among the rest, the parson himself, Rev. H. R. REVELS, was obliged to give bail for his appearance before the Recorder, this A. M.—St. Louis Democrat, 16th.

☞ The bullet by which Gen. JOSEPH WARREN was killed at Bunker Hill in 1775 is still preserved. It is an ounce ball, and was exhibited by ALEXANDER H. EVERETT, on the delivery of an oration at Charlestown, June 17, 1836, in which he exclaimed: "This is the one, fellow-citizens, which I now hold in my hand! The cartridge-paper, which partly covered it, is stained, as you see, with the hero's blood." This ball is now deposited in the Library of the United States Historic-Genealogical Society, with the original affidavit of Rev. WILLIAM MONTAGUE, formerly pastor of Christ Church in this city, who made oath that he obtained the ball in London, of ARTHUR SAVAGE, once an officer of the Customs of the port of Boston, who gave Mr. MONTAGUE this account of the ball:

"On the morning of the 18th of June, 1775, after the battle of Bunker, or Breed's Hill, I, with a number of other royalists and British officers, among whom was General BURGOYNE, went over from Boston to Charlestown to view the battlefield. Among the fallen we found the body of Dr. JOSEPH WARREN, with whom I had been personally acquainted. When he fell, he fell across a rail. This ball I took from his body; and, as I never shall visit Boston again, I will give it to you to take to America, where it will be valuable as a relic of your Revolution."

THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH AND THE SAFETY OF TRAVELERS.—Perhaps, after all, the most efficient check to the fast and dangerous haste—remonstrated against whenever an accident occurs, but still persisted in by navigators and shipowners—would be found in the laying down of an Atlantic telegraph. Against the speed of magnetism it would be in vain for steamships to contend. In being deprived of the credit of bringing so many days' later news, one of the principal inducements to this over-zealous haste would be taken away. The masters of our packet-ships, yielding to the importunities, might be induced to pay more regard to the safety of the passengers. An express rider is at perfect liberty to risk his own neck to any extent, but the commander of a public conveyance, whether ship-captain or stage-driver, who sacrifices the lives of his passengers to his anxiety for a short passage, is guilty of moral, if not of legal, manslaughter.—Boston Telegraph, Oct. 23.

GREAT LOSS.—The Niagara Mail, of Wednesday, says the large three-masted vessel, the Ocean, with a very valuable cargo, was totally destroyed by fire on Tuesday, in the harbor of Port Dalhousie. Loss estimated at $200,000. Port Dalhousie is the harbor for St. Catharines, about 11 miles from Niagara.

THE CHOLERA AT TRINIDAD, W. I.—The schooner Griffith, arrived at Jacksonville, from Trinidad-Port Spain, on the 10th inst., reports to Lt. Gibbons, commanding that at that time the cholera was raging there with fearful violence, the deaths averaging from 70 to 80 a day.

BREAD ROCK (VA.) RACES.—On Thursday, JOHN BELCHER's Die Glaspectre beat with ease C. GREEN's Rube, for a purse of $600—three mile heats. There were but two heats. Time—2.30, 2.36.

Shreveport, La., was visited by a very destructive fire last week. Eight houses were burnt. The loss is quite heavy—very little insurance.

NOTICES OF NEW BOOKS.

SKETCHES OF THE LIVES AND JUDICIAL PRIVICE OF THE CHIEF JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES. By GEORGE ALAN SANTYCHER. New-York: CHARLES SCRIBNER. large 8vo., 350 pages.

This is one of a class of books, whose appearance commands our thanks to both author and publisher. And this is a good specimen of the class. It sketches the lives and labors of the five eminent jurists, who have in succession occupied the lofty position of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States: JOHN JAY, JOHN RUTLEDGE, OLIVER ELLSWORTH, JOHN MARSHALL, and ROGER B. TANEY. Of the first of these, a biography has already been written. Of the last, it is not yet time that one be written—long may it be before the biographer can set down the last chapters of his life. But of the other three, it is very strange that nothing but the merest outlines have ever been sketched. RUTLEDGE, though the Senate never confirmed his nomination, was the choice of WASHINGTON, and his whole career from the hour that he appeared in the first Colonial Congress—its youngest member—to the insanity that premised his death, what writers out, is but a chapter, and a brilliant one in the history of his Country. ELLSWORTH was the unanimous choice of the same Senate that had rejected RUTLEDGE. It is stated that a son-in-law of this distinguished Judge is preparing his biography. We trust so. The old mines are not yet worked out. Great wealth still lies hidden in the chambers of their private and public history.

The sketches are well-written, and skillfully. As a matter of course, they embrace much collateral history and necessarily carry us directly into the violence and acrimony of the political strifes that troubled the souls of our fathers. But this generation can read, without the excitement of any unpleasant reminiscences, the records of those days when the passes which we never breathe but with reverence, were handled about quite carelessly, and not seldom with reviling.

We would have liked these Sketches still better if they had been more than they pretend to be—if they had let us into the domestic life of these public men, and sketched them as they appeared in the sphere in which the public eye was not wont to observe them. For our great men are like great trees; beside the broad-spreading branches and unyielding trunk there are the hidden roots that take hold on the prope of the earth. To discover these hidden roots, and the turns they take, and to know on what they fed, is the privilege of posterity, through the aid of history. It is not a forbidden curiosity, but a profitable one, to explore the secrets of the success of men, whose learning and labors we and our children are religiously taught to admire. But our author aimed not at furnishing strict biographies so much as a history of the Supreme Court; and with this intent, he reviews the most important judicial decisions made by the Justices, somewhat at length. This, while it makes the work far more valuable for men of his profession, does not detract from its interest to the general reader. We trust the race of men able and willing to cultivate the field of personal biography will not soon run out. The volume is printed handsomely in large type, on good white paper, and is stoutly bound in cloth.

THE WIDE-AWAKE GIFT AND KNOW-NOTHING TOKEN FOR 1855. New-York: J. C. DERBY. 12mo. 312 pages.

When the Wide-Awakes have fallen asleep and the Know-Nothings are known no more, this will be a good memento of their former wakefulness and boasted ignorance. It really contains a good deal of excellent matter, mostly of the order to set native blood to thrilling. The opening document is WASHINGTON'S Farewell Address, the closing one the Constitution—not of the Know-Nothing Fraternity, but of the United States. Between these extremes come sharp sayings on the native question, snatches of spirit-stirring song, brief extracts from such orations as PATRICK HENRY and DANIEL WEBSTER, pertinent appeals to the patriotic, and timely editorials from the newspapers, from OAKES SMITH and ANDREW JACKSON, BRANTUS BROOKS, CALEB LYON, HANNAH F. GOULD, JARED SPARKS, P. FRENEAU, EDWARD EVERETT, JOHN SAVAGE, "Anonymous," and many of the rest of mankind. Handsome steel-plates—among them a good full length of WEBSTER—adorn it.

LATER FROM UTAH.

The Emigration—The Utah Indians—Capture of two of them—Average Crop in Utah Territory, &c.

Correspondence of the St. Louis Republican.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Wednesday, Aug 30, 1854.

The emigration for California has almost ceased for this season—the few stragglers who arrive now, wisely considering it better to Winter here than to run the risk of being caught in the snow before they can get through. A well-authenticated report gives us the information that the Indians west of Fort Hall have been very troublesome to emigrants this year, owing to some of the first who passed through early in the season, having wantonly and without provocation, shot several of the Indians who have heretofore been peaceable.

There is a small band of Utah Indians, who have detached themselves from the tribe several years ago, on account of their vicious conduct, which could not be tolerated by those who were disposed to be friendly to the settler. This small party have practised hiding up in the mountains in different districts, and committing depredations upon the settlers whenever they could do so with safety to themselves. On the 8th inst., two boys, of the name of WEBBS, were murdered by these Indians, while absent from home to obtain a load of wood. Their bodies were horribly mutilated. A small party of the friendly Indians, on learning the facts, started for the camp of these murderous renegades, and on arriving there presented themselves as friends. Watching their opportunity, they invited the murderers to ride with them, which of course was cheerfully agreed to. As soon as they were at a sufficient distance from the camp, the friendly Indians seized the murderers and bore them off triumphantly to the settlement, where they were given in charge to the proper officers, and on the 21st inst. they were brought into this place and delivered in charge of U. S. Deputy Marshal BURTON, to be tried before the United States District Court for their crime.

Some half dozen of the friendly Indians accompanied the officers as guard. There are only two accused of the second murder, and two others as accessories. The laws of the Territory provide that no special term of the District Court shall be held unless by petition of 100 legal voters of the Territory, &c. A petition was soon in circulation, and in a very short time the requisite number of signatures was obtained. His Honor Judge SHAVER appointed Thursday, the 24th, to hear the case, and on that day proceedings commenced, and have been continued from day to day until the present time, and will probably continue some days longer. This trial creates considerable interest, inasmuch as the people generally regard it as a turning-point with these desperadoes. If they are condemned and executed, it may serve as a check on the remainder of the band. If they are again suffered to go at large, it will doubtless have a tendency to encourage them in their nefarious career, as they generally regard an act of mercy as nothing but an evidence of cowardice.

From the 12th to the 16th, there arrived three ox trains, bringing thirty-eight bags of mail matter, and weighing some three thousand pounds, chiefly consisting of newspapers and public documents, some of which would have been highly interesting in the year 1851, but now are scarcely worth the trouble of looking over. We are credibly informed that there is about five thousand pounds more of such mail matter, on the way, by the same mode of conveyance, i. e., ox trains. Is it any wonder that the inhabitants of Utah feel a delicacy in subscribing for papers and periodicals which are published in the States, with the above facts before their eyes. As a general thing, when an Eastern paper is subscribed for here, the subscriber does not expect to receive more than about one-fourth of his paper, and as to the idea of keeping a regular file of any paper to be transmitted by the Eastern mail, experience has taught us that it is useless.

A splendid marble quarry has lately been discovered, about ten miles from this city, which bids fair to rival some of the Eastern samples.

The crops are generally about an average, notwithstanding the millions of grasshoppers which have visited us. Some fine apples and apricots raised this season. Health generally good, and the go-ahead principle predominant. STRANGER.

THE COLUMBUS BANK DEFALCATION.—It is asserted at the Treasury Department that the Government's suit against the City Bank of Columbus, Ohio, is undergoing a final trial at Columbus, Ohio, before the United States District Court. The claim is for $100,000 deposited with that bank, under one of Mr. Secretary CORWIN's transfer drafts, which are held by the present authorities of the Treasury Department to have been illegal.—Washington Star, Saturday.

THE NEW AFRICAN REPUBLIC.—The Maryland Colony in Africa, having organized itself into an Independent Republic and chosen its officers, is hereafter to be styled the "State of Maryland in Liberia"—a name which, however it may indicate the love felt for their native State by the citizens of the new Republic, is anything but creditable to their judgment or taste. The newly elected Governor is a Mr. PROUT.

CHILDREN NOT IN SCHOOL.—There are in Cincinnati about 16,000 children, between the ages of five and sixteen years, who should constantly, and do sometimes, attend school. Yet only a little over a half (9,617) of them are daily in attendance.

CITY POLITICS.

Ratification Meeting—Mike Walsh in the Field.

A mass meeting to ratify the nomination of MIKE WALSH for Congress, was held last evening at the corner of Canal and Centre-streets.

HENRY EDWARD was chosen Chairman, and a large number of Vice Precidents and Secretaries were appointed.

The meeting was first addressed by Gen. WALDRIDGE.

He said he could not suffer the occasion to transpire without coming to bear his testimony, and contributing what he might by any expression of his, to whatever might tend to advance the interest of the man who was his associate from this State on the floor of the Hall of National Representatives, as he believed there was no man there more fearless, worthy, honest and patriotic.

Mr. HASKIN thought it was particularly necessary at this time to send a man back to Congress who, by his fearlessness, eloquence and reason, will be capable of staying the tide of fanaticism which will be in the next Congress, and which will endeavor to repeal the Nebraska bill.

Mr. WALSH next spoke. He would not go into a detailed recapitulation of what he had done, as they all knew what his course had been. He had received their confidence and believed he had not abused it, and had never omitted an opportunity to defend their rights and vindicate their interests. He would make no appeal to base motives, but came before them as one asking and claiming their suffrages as an honest and upright man; but he did not wish the support of any who did not believe him honest in his sentiments and approve of them.

He was blamed by some because he voted for the Nebraska bill; he did not wish to get any man's vote on false pretences, therefore he would plainly tell them that he voted for the Nebraska bill, and was proud of it; and he did not do it with the pretended justification that Slavery never would go there—Slavery goes wherever the avarice or cupidity of man takes it, of whatever kind it be, whether negro slavery or not.

The meeting then closed, and the crowd moved in procession up Centre-street.

Council.

In the Thirteenth Council District, JOHN H. MCKINLEY, Esq., has received the Whig nomination for Councilman. Mr. MC KINLEY is a lawyer, and was educated in the office of the late EDWARD SANFORD, Esq., and is now the law partner of ex-Recorder TALLMADGE.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Emigrant Ship Ashore.

The packet ship American Union, Captain OTIS, arrived at this port on Monday evening from Liverpool. While on the passage up the bay she missed stays and went ashore on the Knoll. She stuck very hard and sprung a leak. The pumps were immediately put into operation, and with the aid of the steamtug Leviathan she was released from her perilous situation and towed to the Quarantine during the night. She was ashore about three hours, and sustained considerable damage. She had sixty emigrants on board.

The Stuyvesant Guards passed our office yesterday, on their return from a target excursion.

The "Black Joke," Guards, composed of the members of Engine Company No. 33, Capt. JACOB H. BEAVER, were out yesterday, to the number of 70 muskets. They went to Yonkers, where valuable prizes were awarded.

Fifth Avenue Scandal.

We find the following bit of scandal in the New-York correspondence of the Baltimore American:

"It is rumored that another great divorce case is on the tapis. It is beyond doubt that a certain Fifth-avenue millionaire has recently had serious grounds of complaint against his "better half," who is a lady of considerable attractions and some twenty years his junior. A young and handsome French Count, who had been employed to instruct the children of the husband by his first wife in la langue Francaise, and the madame, it is said, were discovered in flagrante delicto. The Count managed to elude the rage of the injured husband—fled through a back window, and immediately set out for parts unknown."

Quick Passages.

The clipper ships Phenix, Capt. HOXIE, and Governor Morton, Capt. BURGESS, arrived at this port yesterday—the former in 19 days, and the latter in 23 days, from Liverpool. The G. M. lost 30 of her passengers by cholera on the passage.

NEW-JERSEY.

Shocking Murder in Newark.

One of the Ward Marshals, named MAXWELL BADGELY, was stabbed and almost instantly killed on Monday evening, by an Italian prisoner whom he was conducting to jail. About 2 o'clock in the evening the Italian, in company with a Hungarian, were brought into the City Marshal's office for drunkenness and disturbance, by Officers BADGELY and SLINGERLAND. They were committed by Justice HYDE, the Italian under the name of John Doe, as he refused to give his real name. During their stay in the Marshal's office, they were very riotous and exhibited much vindictiveness of feeling. The two prisoners mentioned, being handcuffed together, the left hand of the Italian fastened to the right of the other, thus leaving the right hand of the former free, were taken toward the jail by Officer BADGELY, Officers SLINGERLAND and GARRABANT following with two other prisoners handcuffed in a similar manner. When the party had turned the corner of Warren into Wilsey-street, near the jail, Officer BADGELY was heard to cry for help, and the other officers who were a short distance behind, on running up, found that he was stabbed!

LATER FROM TEXAS.

War with the Indians—Outrages—Movements of the Army, &c.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, Oct. 18.

We have San Antonio papers of the 5th, Austin 7th, Galveston 15th, and a number of other Texas papers of late dates.

Capt. P. CALHOUN, in command at Fort Chadbourne, has written a letter to Major NEIGHBORS, from which the Austin State Gazette makes the following extract:

"We may never consider ourselves at war with the Indians. Last night one of the men of my command was wounded while bathing, between 12 and 1 o'clock, in the creek, a few hundred yards from the fort. He received eleven arrow wounds, six of the arrows remaining in him. Although so badly wounded, he escaped, and was brought in by one of the married men living on the outskirts of the garrison, who heard his cries. He still lives, but will probably die to-night. The command is reduced to little over fifty men, and many of these not worth much, so that my hands are tied except so far as the post is concerned. Had I one hundred men now I would carry the war into Africa."

Major NEIGHBORS suggests the propriety of sending one of the ranging companies to the aid of Capt. CALHOUN. The Comanches, it is said, can bring several thousand warriors into the field.

The State Gazette, of the 7th, has the following paragraph:

We are sorry to learn of an encounter near Carrizo, in Starr County, between the United States troops and Indians, in which, entirely owing to the inadequate force of the former, one corporal was so severely wounded that he died; two privates and four horses were also wounded. One Indian was killed and three wounded. Capt. JONES, who headed the command, finally dispersed the Indians, but it was a hard struggle. At last advices Capt. ELLIOT and a few troops were on the trail of the Indians.

It seems from our letters and papers that the late rains and storm have pervaded the whole State, doing immense mischief. The loss in the cotton crop in various counties estimated at from 30,000 to 50,000 bales.

The recent victory of the Lipans over the Comanches, near Fort Clark, is said to have led to several subsequent skirmishes; and that on one or two occasions as many as fifteen or twenty warriors were killed on both sides.

The yellow fever still continued in Galveston. The number of deaths from the commencement of the epidemic to the 9th inst. was 362.

The Indiana Banking Securities.

From the Indianapolis Journal.

We have been furnished the following list of securities deposited by the Free Banks with the Auditor:

Indiana	5 Per Cents	$3,200,000
Indiana	5½ Per Cents	608,780
Virginia	6 Per Cents	2,790,000
Louisiana	6 Per Cents	706,000
Kentucky	6 Per Cents	57,000
Georgia	6 and 7 Per Cents	99,000
Missouri	6 Per Cents	545,000
Tennessee	6 Per Cents	85,000
Michigan	6 Per Cents	26,000
North Carolina	6 Per Cents	185,000
Pennsylvania	5 Per Cents	971,000
Ohio	6 Per Cents	71,000
Total		$7,851,780

The Indiana 5's taken 50 to 55.
Pennsylvania 5's taken 56 to 58.

Within sixty days between $600,000 and $1,000,000 have been retired from circulation by the different banks, and the securities withdrawn. The Auditor says "the holders of the securities these banks rep, were offered par value for them within a week, and over one hundred thousand dollars of them have been bought in by the State, and paid for in gold. Of the security to the holders of Free Bank bills, afforded by these bonds, everybody can easily judge for themselves."

The Banks.

From the St. Louis Intelligencer.

The new Bank Law which recently went into operation in Ohio cut off the finest field for the circulation of the Wild-Cat Money of Indiana. The Louisville people were crowing over the Cincinnati Editors at a great rate a few days ago, and inviting the Indianians to bring along their money and their trade to Louisville. The idea was acted upon, as far as sending in the money went, to such an extent that the Louisville brokers and merchants were speedily over-run with it, and refused to receive any more, especially as the Banks themselves decline to redeem it or convert it into Eastern Exchange, except at a very heavy discount.

The holders of Indiana Money in this place were flocking to the Brokers' offices with it during the whole of yesterday. We understand that one Banking house received not less than $50,000 worth of this paper, and not less than $150,000 worth of it must have been sold yesterday to our brokers. Many who had large amounts on hand preferred, however, to hold on to it.

We hope that the brokers will immediately send all this currency where it belongs, and not let it loose upon us again. We have enough of this Wild-Cat Money as it is, and the disappearance, for good and all, of this doubtful Indiana currency, will be a relief to the community.

The Stringency.

From the Toledo Blade.

The extreme stringency in money matters continues. The refusal to take Indiana Bank bills is quite general in town. The small bill few we should think was very little regarded, many defying it, and the more conscientious and law-abiding, shielding themselves behind numerous "legal opinions" against the constitutionality of the act. Small Ohio Bank Notes have been issued in quite large quantities, as we understand, but neither these nor small notes, nor gold and silver, yet seem to take the place of foreign small bills. We never saw so little of either. All, and everything, small and large, that will pay debts is ravenously seized, and therefore good par currency seems to be allowed little or no circulation. Quite a large proportion of our circulation were the bills of the new Indiana Banks, and the exclusion of their notes is felt the most severely on the street trade, and on the laboring population. If relief is not obtained soon, we think many enterprises will be embarrassed among us. We are told by those whose experience has covered many years, that the financial distress of the past week has been more severe than has been known in Toledo since 1836-9.

False Currency Rumors.

From the Cincinnati Gazette.

Evil disposed persons have been circulating reports for several days past prejudicial to the standing of various Banking institutions, which, but for the fact that such rumors, however unworthy their source or improbable their character, have some influence in the community, would not be worthy of notice. Yesterday and to-day it was reported that the Commercial Bank of Kentucky, the Southern Bank of Kentucky, and Circleville Bank of Ohio, had failed. A dispatch from Louisville this evening says the report with reference to the Commercial Bank is without foundation, and we need hardly add that there is no truth in the rumor with reference to the other two. There is not in Ohio, we believe, a better managed or more sound institution than the Bank of Circleville.

Indiana Money.

From the Louisville Journal.

The notes of the Indiana State Stock Banks are generally refused, though some of the wholesale drygoods houses take them in preference to sixty to ninety days' notes in exchange for goods. Some of the brokers are buying some of them at from 5 to 10 ⅌ cent. discount, while others refuse them at any price. They are not considered valueless, but the impossibility of rendering them available for some time to come, and the large amount they have already on hand, has forced most of the bankers to pursue this course. The Stock Bank at Madison and a few others, are exceptions. They have funds deposited here for redemption of their notes, and so long as they continue to do so they will be taken at the same rate of discount as the notes of the State Bank of Indiana.
